YOUR HEART MAY BE BEATING BUT YOU CAN BE RULED DEAD

PARIS (Reuters) — France's highest medical authority has decided that a man whose heart is still beating may be ruled dead if it can be proved that his brain will never again be able to resume control of his vital functions.

The effect of the National Academy of Medicine's decision will be to permit French surgeons in certain clearly-defined cases to remove living organs for transplanting from men with no hope of life.

Doctors specializing in such grafting operations had been faced with a moral dilemma in deciding whether they were organs — heart, lungs or liver — from a "dead" man who might technically be still alive.

Modern medical apparatus enables such organs to be kept going by artificial means even when a patient's cerebral functions are totally extinguished.

The uncertainty was ended when the academy accepted the report of a special commission set up in January to define the symptoms of death in such special cases.

The most useful of such symptoms were those revealed by study of the functions of the brain, a fragile organ indispensable to life and impossible to replace, the report said.

Grounding of Planes Threatens Air Canada

NO PUSSYCAT is Kitty, but a 150-pound Paraguayan jaguar. Kitty is an attendant at a Mill Valley, Calif., service station where hoodlums recently beat an employee. Owner Harry Fitzgibbons says Kitty never saw a jungle, but has been trained as a police dog and will attack on command. Off duty, Kitty is the pet of the four Fitzgibbons children—or at least there were four at last count.

Midnight Strike By Sales Staff

MONTREAL (CP)—If Air Canada sales employees go on strike tonight action by other employees supporting them may ground all the company's aircraft.

Cleve Kidd, spokesman for the Canadian Airline Pilots Association and for the National Liaison Committee of airline employees, of which the pilots' association is a member, said today the company's pilots have a work contract and will therefore report for work.

"However, there are groups represented on the liaison committee who may feel differently, and one, the International Association of Machinists has already intimated that its members will not cross picket lines," he said.

GIVE SUPPORT

Only members of the International Association of Machinists (CLC) and the pilots have so far announced how they will act in the event of a strike. In Vancouver, two labor unions vital to ground operations and maintenance at Vancouver International Airport have pledged their support for the sales employees.

They are the Teamsters Union (CLC) and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union. The oil workers fuel aircraft and the teamsters operate ground transport, airlines limousines and baggage trucks.

Mr. Kidd said it is up to each group to make its own decision on how it should act if there is a strike.

"The pilots have a work contract which they feel binds them to report for work and so they will. But if aircraft are not serviced they won't be able to fly them."

Meanwhile, talks between representatives of the Sales Employees Association and Air Canada continued in Montreal in an effort to avert the walkout at midnight of 1,453 sales staff.

The National Liaison Committee sent a telegram to Labor Minister Nicholson Tuesday saying that from the support indicated by its member unions it is apparent the airline would be unable to operate if the strike came off.

The union, which represents passenger agents, switchboard and communications operators, is asking for a two-year contract providing for yearly 10-per-cent pay increases and a 37½ hour work week.

The airline has offered a 15-per-cent increase over a 30-month period.

Envoy Makes Second Trip

OTTAWA (CP)—Special Canadian envoy Chester Ronning now is in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, on his second mission there since March for the Canadian government, officials said today.

They said he is carrying on the exchange of views begun in March.

However, it was assumed that Mr. Ronning, 71, of Camrose, Alta., is sounding out of the Communist North Vietnamese on the possibilities of negotiating an end to the Viet Nam war.

Mr. Ronning, born in China, came out of retirement this year—he had been a career diplomat—to make a special trip to Hanoi and Saigon to talk with Vietnamese officials of north and south. He has been advising Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin on the Southeast Asia situation and it had been assumed here for some weeks that he would return to Viet Nam for further discussions.

IS DISCREET

Canada has also been making what have been officially described as "discreet probes" as a member of the International Truce Supervisory Commission to examine any and all leads toward possible negotiations.

Informants here said the government regards a new Geneva conference as the best framework for negotiations aimed at settlement of the Viet Nam war.

It was the 1954 Geneva conference which established the commission on which Canada, India and Poland serve.

Mr. Ronning saw long service as Canadian ambassador to China before the Communist victory there and subsequently as Canadian ambassador to India.

Non-Military Group Formed By 9 Nations

SEOUL (AP) — Nine East Asian and Pacific nations agreed today to form a new regional association — called ASPAC—for co-operation in economic, political and other non-military fields.

Arrangements for the new organization, which will be an informal one without a treaty basis, were worked out today during the second day of the Asian-Pacific conference of foreign ministers.

It brings together South Korea, Japan, Nationalist China, the Philippines, South Viet Nam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and Malaysia. Laos attended the talks here as an observer and may join.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman of Thailand, who will become chairman of ASPAC because its next meeting will be in Bangkok, said other countries such as India might also come in if they desire.

Bombs Drop Closer To Port City

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. military headquarters today announced the closest air raids of the war to the North Vietnamese port city of Haiphong.

Navy bombers from aircraft carriers in the Tonkin Gulf struck a missile radar site eight miles southeast of Haiphong Tuesday and a spokesman said the radar went off the air.

The spokesman said another navy raid hit a radar site 10 miles northeast of Haiphong and that this radar also went off the air. Both radars were used for guidance of Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles which are clustered around Hanoi and Haihong for defence of the country's two major cities against American air raids.

MOSCOW VISIT of four or five days, starting July 12, has been scheduled by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India. She expects Soviet economic and military assistance to her country to be discussed with Russian leaders.

Most-Wanted Man Escapes

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre Daoust, 25, who figured in the Quebec Provincial Police's first 10-most-wanted men list last year before his capture in October, escaped from custody today while in a hospital for treatment.

Daoust was awaiting trial on two charges of armed robbery, conspiracy and possession of offensive weapons. Police describe him as dangerous.

Canada, France Move Closer

PARIS (CP)—Plans for closer economic co-operation between Canada and France and their business communities were outlined today at a press conference winding up the 12-day visit of a Canadian mission led by Industry Ministry C. M. Drury.

"The mission is most gratified by the results of their visit," said Drury as he reported on talks among industrialists, bankers, scientists and others in his party with their French counterparts.

"The many discussions and contacts have provided us with the basis for suggestions for furthering closer economic collaboration between the two countries and their respective business communities.

"There is scope for intensified inter-change between Canada and France in fields where contacts at present exist but also important opportunities for closer relations in new fields."

The 22-man mission was returning to Canada "with an important message to Canadian business and industry. It is that French accomplishments in scientific and technical research and their industrial applications should be better known in Canada and should find a growing place in our economic future."

Canada also had "much that is new and promising to offer in the area of research and advanced technology from which France may wish to profit."

"I believe that the intensification of our co-operation through investment and technological exchanges will together with other measures soon result in a significant expansion of trade between us."

U.K., Canada Plan Joint Committee

LONDON (CP) — Canada and Britain may establish a joint cabinet committee to deal with trade and other economic problems between the two countries. The committee would function like one which already exists between Canada and the United States.

Canadian Trade Minister Winters was reported by informants to have the joint cabinet idea in mind when he told a Canadian Chamber of Commerce meeting Tuesday that he has been "exploring with my colleagues in the British government how we might strengthen the process of consultation and co-operation between us."

Winters said also that Canada and Britain are working together in many fields and "I hope to see this collaboration deepen and spread for the benefit of both our countries."

HONG KONG HIT AGAIN

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Early morning rains caused new flooding and a land slide today in Hong Kong, where the death toll in weekend rains may be as high as 80.

Nearly an inch of rain fell in 10 minutes in today's downpour, undoing much of the reconstruction work since Sunday's deluge in this British colony.

HEAVY FINE LEVIED ON FIREMEN'S UNION

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal judge has ordered payment of $27,500 in fines by the Railway Firemen's Union and its president for violating a court order in a four-day strike against eight big U.S. railways last April.

However, U.S. District Judge Alexander Holtzoff postponed collection of the fines until the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (AFL-CIO) and union president H. E. Gilbert can appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Mine-Mill Charge Withdrawn in U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government decided Tuesday to drop a charge of Communist infiltration brought in 1955 against the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.)

The charge had been laid by the justice department before the Subversite Activities Control Board, an independent agency, covering the period 1952-55.

The board four years ago found that some leading union officers "are, and have been, members of the Communist party." But an appeal court referred the case back to the board on grounds the evidence was old and did not cover—as required by law—the last three years.

The justice department said that in effect it has no new evidence for that period, but a spokesman said this does not mean it considers the union leadership was free of Communist affiliation in 1952-55.

Mine-Mill has about 40,000 members in the United States as well as representing workers at Trail, B.C., and other Western Canada mines and metal-refining plants.

Several years ago the United Steel Workers of America (CC) finally won a long fight with Mine-Mill to represent workers at the International Nickel Co. mining - refining operation at Sudbury, Ont.

There have been merger talks going on recently between the two unions.

Purge Continuing

FAKIR Laxman Sandra Rao entertained his audience in Bombay by walking over burning coals, eating glass and tacks and drinking nitric acid. As the climax of his performance he promised to walk on water but he promptly sank to the bottom of the tank. Police prevented the angry spectators —who paid $8,000 to see the miracle—from mobbing Rao. Maybe he should freeze the water first. (AP Wirephoto.)

TIEUP LOOMS ON RAILWAY

OTTAWA (CP)—Underlining a growing militancy among its 22,000 rank-and-file railway members, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers has voted heavily in favor of a strike if current contract demands on the CNR are not met.

They are seeking a 90-cent hourly wage increase spread over a two-year contract plus job security.

A union source said today the secret mail ballot was counted at CBRT headquarters here Tuesday and is overwhelmingly in favor of strike action if necessary. President W. J. Smith is to announce details of the count Thursday.

The CBRT is one of three groups of non-operating unions negotiating with the two major railways. All three are in the conciliation stage, expected to take another month.

Seaway Walkout Possible Friday

OTTAWA (CP)—"The minor skirmishing is just about over," and mediation talks in the St. Lawrence Seaway labor dispute will get down to the vital wage issue later today, the federal mediator reported at the luncheon recess.

Senator Norman MacKenzie in his third day of discussions with seaway officials and representatives of 1,200 operating employees, said progress had been made on some of the lesser items at issue.

The workers are poised for a Friday noon strike. A walkout would cripple the international waterway by sealing off the Montreal - Lake Ontario and Welland Canal sections.

Core of the dispute is the union's demand for a 35-per-cent wage increase to bring Canadian rates more in line with those paid on the U.S. side of the seaway.

Dock Workers Accept

MONTREAL (CP)—A mass meeting of some 1,700 Montreal members of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) voted unanimously today to end their 39-day strike and go back to work Thursday morning.

A spokesman for the ILA said some 350 longshoremen were back on the job at the port of Trois-Rivieres at 8 a.m. today. The Trois-Rivieres longshoremen voted Sunday night to accept the latest contract offer made by the Shipping Federation of Canada.

National Harbors Board officials say the longshoremen will be working every night until 11 o'clock to clear the multi-million-dollar backlog of export and import goods now clogging the three ports.

LONGSHOREMEN OFFICIALS SURRENDER, RELEASED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union surrendered to a sheriff at the Vancouver courthouse today.

The men appeared before Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere and were each released on their own recognizance pending hearing of contempt of court charges.

Mr. Justice Verchere ordered the men arrested Tuesday. The men, heads of the union's various B.C. locals, failed to appear in court as ordered. Today they walked en masse into the courthouse and voluntarily surrendered.

Among the 10 persons was G. W. Ball, business agent for the Victoria local.

The contempt proceedings arose after the employers obtained a supreme court injunction ordering the union to countermand any orders it issued for a Victoria Day work stoppage.

Company officials had heard the union planned to order its members to book off sick en masse to protest statutory holiday working provisions.

B.C. ports were crippled May 23 when most of the union's 2,000 members failed to report to work.

Resort Men Fight 7-Mile Log Drive

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Resort owner John Kost will appear in court today in an attempt to get an injunction against a huge log drive down the Stellako River, 85 miles west of here.

The drive, of some 8,000,000 board feet of timber, was authorized Tuesday by the provincial government, in defiance of orders from Ottawa.

The federal fisheries department said movement of the logs down the seven-mile stretch of river would devastate salmon spawning grounds. Mr. Kost, and other resort owners in the area, say it will cost them revenue from sport fishermen.

The fisheries department stid the log drive will endanger the spawning of 120,000 to 140,000 salmon in the river next September.

If the injunction is obtained, the logs which have already gone down the river will go to the sawmill, but no more timber will be permitted down the river.

The drive is from Francois Lake to Fraser Lake.

Application for the injunction will be made jointly by the East End Francois Lake Resort Association and the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

Application for a mandamus order was refused Tuesday by Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins on the grounds that notice of the application had not been sent to the attorney-general and the fisheries department.

Mr. Kost, spokesman for the resort association, said Tuesday night that if an injunction is granted, it probably will not take effect in time to prevent the majority of the log drive.

"But we're not giving up. We'll fight this to the end," he said.

Dick Phillips, vice-president of the B.C. Wildlife Federation said Tuesday that Fraser Lake Sawmills, the company driving the logs, shouldn't be allowed to continue operating if it can't afford to truck logs seven miles. Other companies are trucking logs up to 70 miles and still making a profit he said.

"There is no possible excuse in my mind for running logs down a seven-mile river," he said.

Bleeders Form Island Chapter

Berserk Woman Stabs Three With Ice Pick

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A beserk woman with an ice pick near Golden Gate Park's Steinhart aquarium Tuesday seriously wounded a baby and two women before being subdued by two priests and an air force officer.

Mrs. Irene Warren, 28, said she took her eyes off her baby's carriage momentarily when suddenly "there was this overdressed woman with her head inside the carriage and it seemed as if she was hitting Steven," five months old.

The mother grappled with the unidentified woman and suffered stab wounds in the right thigh and left shoulder.

Mrs. Norma White, 38, a visitor from Port Orchard, Wash., who was in the crowd, suffered stab wounds in the neck and back after she found the woman with the ice pick "suddenly looking me straight in the ."

Sidney Man Pleads Guilty To Burglary

Barry Cragg, 9655 First St., Sidney, pleaded guilty to breaking into a car wash firm Saturday when he appeared in central court Tuesday.

He was remanded to June 21 for sentence.

Police testified they checked the accused and a companion in the parking lot of Supersonic Car Wash, 628 Gorge E., about 4 a.m. Saturday and recovered about $180 in cash and $90 worth of tools and merchandise.

Two vending machines in the car wash had been forced open.

NEW YORK — It wasn't a bull or a bear that caused a prickle of excitement in the financial canyons of lower Manhattan.

A 15-pound wild porcupine was spotted waddling amid traffic in the intersection of Duane and West Broadway. Where it came from, nobody knows—there aren't supposed to be any porcupines in Manhattan.

When police gave chase, the porcupine scurried into the basement of an automat restaurant. It dashed through the legs of a salad girl who was changing into a fresh uniform.

VANCOUVER, Wash.—Those green leaves that Vancouver motorist John H. Burton saw blowing along a rural Vancouver road turned out to be mostly $20 bills.

It took him about five hours to gather up $454 in currency and a wallet and get the valuables to their owner, Timothy Hansen, also of Vancouver, who was difficult to locate.

Hansen, in military service, had been riding a motorcycle and didn't know he'd lost anything.

LONDON—The class-conscious Royal Navy no longer issues different chamber pots to its officers and ratings, Parliament was assured.

The days have gone when admirals availed themselves of chamber pots emblazoned with a royal cipher in gold, while sailors on the lower decks used, if they were lucky, a plain pot with a blue admiralty crest inscribed on it.

Labor MP Arthur Lewis had asked in the House of Commons why different types of chamber pot were used in the navy.

Navy Minister Joseph Mallalieu told the House that Lewis' information was out of date. No distinction was made any longer and none had been since the Second World War.

HOLLYWOOD—Capitol Records has withdrawn the album cover of the latest Beatles' recording because disc jockeys complained it was offensive.

The cover showed the singing group dressed in butchers' smocks amid chunks of meat and bone, in the centre of which was a doll's severed head. The long-haired quartet wore sadistic grins.

A Capitol spokesman said the picture was taken in London, and was the Beatles' own idea of pop art.

TOKYO—It seems that the saying, "Finders keepers, losers weepers," doesn't apply in Japan.

During the past two years, a housewife, a glove maker and a barmaid have found and returned more than two million yen (about $7,000).

Jingoro Okubo, a maker of fireproof gloves, found a vinyl bag containing 70 10,000 yen notes in a bundle of rags he bought. He took the money to the police.

Rites Held For Drowned Railroader

LADYSMITH — Funeral service was held Monday for James Richard Kenyon, a veteran railroader and native of Ladysmith.

Mr. Kenyon was drowned last month when his boat capsized on the Muskeg River near Prince George. His body was not recovered until June 6.

Mr. Kenyon, 48, had devoted most of his working life to the railroad industry.

For the past 14 years he was superintendent of construction for the Pacific Great Eastern.

For several years he was with the New Zealand and Northern Queensland Railway in Australia and worked on construction of the Pine Point Railway from Great Slave Lake to Roma on the Northern Alberta Railway.

He served five years overseas in the Second World War with the First Canadian Survey Regiment in the Italian campaign and on the northwestern front.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. W. Michie and a brother, Albert, both of Ladysmith.

371 Tech Grads Have Jobs Waiting

Convocation for the first graduating class of the B.C. Institute of Technology will be held Friday and all 371 of them already have jobs.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson will be the keynote speaker.

Dr. G. Neil Perry, deputy education minister, will present National Diplomas of Technology to the graduates and representatives of industry will present silver medals and cash prizes to the top student in each department.

Judy Monk of Burnaby, graduate in the hotel, motel and restaurant management course, will be valedictorian.

17 COURSES

The institute, located in Burnaby, was opened in 1964 and offers 17 two-year courses in such technologies as instrumentation, forest products, broadcasting, medical laboratory work, chemistry, metallurgy and business administration.

An expansion program planned for the institute will qualify it to enrol up to 3,200 students in 26 courses.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies were clear over all but extreme northwestern B.C. this morning. A ridge of high pressure producing this sunny weather will slowly move over Alberta in the next 48 hours.

A storm centre moving northward to the Alaskan panhandle will bring gale force winds to the Queen Charlottes and rain to the north coast today. A weather system extending southward from this storm will edge onto the coast tonight and spread cloud and a few showers ahead of it.

112 PUERTO RICANS ARRESTED

Clear Streets . . . With a Smile!

CHICAGO (AP) — Five hundred policemen removed more than 2,000 persons from riot-torn streets in a predominantly Puerto Rican area Tuesday night and arrested 31.

Told to "clear the streets and do it with a smile," police held disturbances to a minimum after two nights of rioting.

The arrests brought to 112 the number of persons taken into custody since the rioting began Sunday after a Puerto Rican youth was shot and wounded by a policeman. The policeman said the youth pulled a gun as the officer tried to break up a fight.

A lack of communication between the residents and police has been blamed by community leaders for the rioting.

The area, settled in Chicago's infancy by Polish and German immigrants, gradually has been taken over by Puerto Ricans since the Second World War.

Social workers describe the inhabitants as mostly transients shuttling back and forth to Puerto Rico and having little time for learning English or growing accustomed to the city life.

In a pacifying move, police officials ordered immediate integration of two-man patrols. Negroes, Latin Americans, Jews and members of other minority groups will work together whenever possible.

DEPOSED RULER of Yemen, Imam (King) Mohammed Al-Badr said in an interview Tuesday that virtually all major Yemini tribes have rallied to him and that the northwest part of his country is under royalist control. The Imam, now 38, was overthrown in 1962 by the ruling republican government. (AP Wirephoto)

Common Market Pact Ends Geneva Deadlock

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — The Common Market's council of ministers reached agreement Tuesday on important industrial and agricultural issues that will enable the stalled Kennedy round of tariff-cutting talks in Geneva to go ahead.

The Geneva negotiations have been held up for the last year because of lack of agreement among the six Common Market countries and because of their seven - month internal crisis which ended last January.

The negotiations must succeed before July, 1967—the date on which President Johnson's authority to make 50-per-cent tariff cuts expires.

The most important agreement Tuesday was on world grain arrangements.

WILL FIX PRICE

- A world reference price for wheat should be fixed at a level equal to the present Canadian price plus $2.50 to $3.50 a ton. The Canadian price is $76.75 a ton.
- Support for grain production should be kept at their present levels in all major producer countries.
- Self-sufficiency levels for grain production should be fixed for all producer countries. Any production above these levels would be considered as a surplus.

In the case of the Common Market, this level would be equal to 90 per cent of total consumption, plus net commercial sales and an acceptable amount of stock.

Surplus production above this level would be sold at low prices or given away to developing countries in need of food aid, such as India.

Every producing country or economic unit would be responsible for financing its own donations to developing countries.

The Common Market's disposal of surpluses would be financed by the community's agricultural fund according to a system yet to be worked out.

Observers said the 90-per-cent self-sufficiency level for grains left the door open to imports from other countries such as Canada and the United States.

It was a compromise between France, the community's major grain-producer which did not want production limited, and the main importing countries such as West Germany and Holland which did not want Canadian and American grains shut out.

Other Common Market countries are Luxembourg, Italy and The Netherlands.

Wilson Wins Support For Far East Policy

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson today won a four-to-one vote of confidence from his parliamentary supporters for his government's Far East military policy.

A private meeting of Labor members of Parliament rejected by 225 votes to 54 a proposal that Britain should withdraw from Malaysia, Singapore and the Persian gulf by 1970.

The meeting room was so tightly packed for the debate that many parliamentarians had to stand.

Officially these party meetings are private but Wilson was given permission to circulate the text of his speech in view of its importance overseas.

He asked members if they wanted "to pull out of all influence in Asia except the very limited influence we shall be able to exert in UN debates, telling other people what they ought to do."

Wilson said such a policy would prevent Britain intervening "in a United Nations or Commonwealth context to stop a small conflagration becoming a big one."

He said it would also leave Asia to Communist China, the United States and the Soviet Union, "with a small peripheral influence exerted by Australia and New Zealand—but Japan coming up fast on the rails."

Pause in the Program

SEVERAL INTERESTING points emerge in regard to the settlement of the Quebec longshoremen's strike, which apparently will be ratified by all parties to the dispute.

Prime Minister Pearson's personal intervention at a late point in the protracted negotiations brought both sides in contact with a master mediator and it was only a matter of talks which lasted far into the night before a compromise solution for the major issues was achieved.

The piercing cries for governmental intervention, recently voiced in the Commons by Mr. Douglas and others, are thus shown to have been mere political exercises. The government was not ignoring the strike, as charged. It was not neglecting its duty. Mr. Pearson allowed the negotiations, under the government's appointee, Judge Rene Lippe, to pursue their normal course, then when the situation was ripe for his intervention, he brought the opposing side face to face for a final showdown. This is approved practice in difficult cases. What of value could Mr. Douglas and his Socialists have added to this situation?

The dockers have won a substantial wage increase—a total of 80 cents an hour over a two-year contract. Since the raise directly adds to the cost of imports and exports, it will be felt in varying measure throughout the Canadian economy. But perhaps of more significance, the agreement retains existing regulations regarding the size of work gangs—in other words, a reduction of costs through increased automation of the cargo-working process has been postponed for at least eighteen months.

In opposing automation the union is, of course, seeking job protection for its members, as it has every right to do. But in opposing a practical application of automation it is fighting a losing battle. For whether introduced abruptly or over an extended period of time, the increasingly complex mechanization of industrial processes must inevitably proceed.

This is an age of automation; this is the principle on which our technological progress must be based—the progress that is supposed eventually to lead us into a world of ease and plenty. In the development of that change-over it is inevitable that some workers will have to be placed in alternative jobs. It is the task of government, management and labor to ease the effects of the transition—but the transition itself cannot long be halted. Insofar as we deny ourselves mechanical improvement we retard productivity and all of us are the poorer.

Thus the manpower clause in the Quebec settlement should be thought of as an interim arrangement, and the intervening time before the next contract negotiations should be used to devise a way in which the improvements of twentieth-century technology can be applied without undue hardship to those directly affected.

Judge of Judges?

THE STUDY BY THE ASSOCIATION of Canada Law Teachers showing that almost all the superior court judges appointed in eight Canadian provinces between 1945 and 1965 were primarily political appointees hardly comes as news to any politically aware person.

The naming of Canadian judges from the ranks of the party faithful in the legal profession is a time-honored custom. Whether it is a good one is sometimes debatable since from time to time there have been notoriously bad judges selected by this system who have been carefully protected from well-merited dismissal by the fact that it is much easier to appoint a man to the bench than to get rid of him once he is there.

It must be said, however, that the system of appointment cannot be too bad since the Canadian judiciary as a whole enjoys a high reputation, even though most judges were selected at least in part on the basis of political loyalties. This is the nub of the situation, in fact, whether the appointment has been made primarily on political grounds or whether the appointee's politics was secondary to his legal acumen. To this it must be added that some first-rate judges were not eminently successful in private law practice while there have been some top-notch lawyers elevated to the bench who have not made good judges.

It would be absurd to attempt to name men to the judiciary who have no history of political affiliation, since the field of candidates would then be impossibly small. Perhaps, however, there is merit in the suggestion of the law teachers' association that an independent commission be set up in each province to review candidates for elevation to the bench. Naturally the list of candidates selected by the political party in power would include party faithful, but the review group could weed out the men whose qualifications are not good enough on other grounds—legal knowledge, temperament or personal failings.

As Professor Jacob S. Zeigel of the University of Saskatchewan law school commented on the association report: "Since judges are appointed to administer justice, the system by which they are appointed should reflect justice."

Gold and the Dollar

INTRUSION OF A SOVIET State Bank official into the debate on international monetary reform is providing economists with some material for speculation.

The problem of monetary reform is primarily a Western matter which is of interest to the Russians only obliquely. Nevertheless, Mr. Alexei Poskonov, president of the Soviet Bank, declared recently in an interview with a French financial newspaper that "the currency of a single country must not serve as the base of the international system of payments."

Mr. Poskonov declared that "the weakness and instability of the international monetary system which is based principally on the (U.S.) dollar are universally known." He added that the United States has tried and failed for 10 years to balance its payments and so has "shaken the stability of the international monetary system."

The fact that Mr. Poskonov was echoing, to some extent, French feelings about the international monetary system—and in a French newspaper—makes one wonder whether the whole thing is a plant linked to President de Gaulle's desire to achieve closer relations with Russia, not only for France but for all of Western Europe.

It is a strange coincidence, to say the least, that the head of the Soviet State Bank, should have made public his views at the time when American officials dealing in monetary problems have begun to sound a harder line, arguing that the world is really on a dollar standard and that European nations should accept that fact. Forget about gold, some influential American economists are saying in effect, and recognize the fact that the dollar is the most important medium of exchange in the world today. Any lack of confidence in the dollar, according to this school of thought, is foolish because it is the United States which maintains the stability of the international monetary system.

The Russians, of course, could have another reason for coming out into the open at this time with opposition to using the dollar as the base of the international payments system. In addition to wishing to encourage General de Gaulle, they just happen to be heavy gold producers and would be in a bad way to finance purchases on world markets if gold were supplanted—or even downgraded—as international currency.

ANALYZING L.B.J. SUPPORT

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Minority Is Highly Vocal

MORE and more people are beginning to say that the President has suffered a grave loss of popular support. The pollers agree with the political analysts. But the real question is why this loss has occurred.

Alsop

The fashionable answer is "because of Viet Nam." But here one immediately runs, head on, into what may be called the congressional anomaly. Congress and public opinion closely resemble a cork in a bowl of water. The level of congressional opinion almost never rises far above, or drops far below the level of opinion in the country. And the opponents of the Viet Nam war have made few gains on Capitol Hill.

House Division

The best of all authorities, wise House Majority Leader Carl Albert (Okla.) has estimated that the House of Representatives, on a completely secret ballot, would not give more than 40 votes to any of the assorted policies urged by the President's critics. Thus Johnson would have 90 per cent support in the House on a showdown. And in the Senate, where the critics are most vocal, he would have close to 80 per cent support.

There are signs that in the traditionally isolationist parts of the country, the trumpeting of the new isolationists like Senator J. William Fulbright has awakened a serious response. Iowa is a case in point. Yet the Oregon primary told another story, although Senator Wayne Morse all but wore out his celebrated vocal cords to secure an implied endorsement of neo-isolationism.

By the same token, both the Harris and Gallup polls show declining nationwide support for the soft line on Viet Nam, combined with an increasing demand for tougher prosecution of the war. Both of the most likely Republican nominees in 1968, Governor George Romney and former vice-president Richard Nixon, are also calling for greater toughness.

Want Sterner Policy

According to the inquiring Dr. Gallup, this rising sentiment in favor of a sterner policy is a main cause of the increasing number of voters who do not like the way the president is handling his job. Maybe there is something to that. But there is certainly a lot more to it than that.

The fact of the matter is that Lyndon Johnson has not yet made the essential change-over from the legislative style of leadership to true national leadership. The President's famous desire to achieve a consensus in favor of every step he takes, is the simple proof that he still thinks like a legislative leader rather than a national political leader.

If one can be downright about it, the man who believes he can secure an enduring consensus for a hard ugly war is really a man who believes you can fool all of the people all of the time.

In any war that does not starkly pose the issue of national survival, there is always a substantial minority in opposition. Nor is this a bad thing for it means that the war's problems are debated and the true national interests are pinpointed.

If one can judge by congressional sentiment and the polls, the country still rather strongly believes that vital American interests are engaged in Viet Nam. But the president is not benefitting as much as he should because he was not content with the support of a strong majority. He wanted to be supported by everyone.

In consequence, last year, he all but entered the war by stealth, talking peace while sending troops. The U.S. had 150,000 men on the ground in Viet Nam before the country really woke up to what was happening. As a display of political craft, it was truly astonishing.

On the other hand, it meant that the President had wide-spread support, rather than strong, well-founded deeply convinced support. And this in turn meant that when the war's hard realities began to come home to everyone, there was no general rallying under the banner of the President's leadership.

There was, and is, a general fragmentation of opinion, with very vocal opposition to the President, with no one much to answer his opponents, and with the large, inarticulate majority determined not to be beaten in Viet Nam but still doubtful about what the President was trying to do and how he was proposing to do it.

That is still the position, as far as one can judge. That is why most Republicans are now mainly complaining that the President is not being "candid." And that is the best proof, too, that a true national leader, instead of reaching for two birds in the bush of an impossible consensus, always tries to rally and consolidate the bird-in-hand of solid majority support.

If this lesson is now learned by this very big man who has almost stealthily shown so much courage, much will be gained.

LETHBRIDGE'S GARDEN

By JAMES H. GRAY

Centennial Act of Apology

FOR many years Lethbridge has laid claim, with some validity, to being the most prosperous little city in Canada. It is now staking out a claim as the "go-gettingest." It is putting the finishing touches on its $300,000 Centennial Project a full year ahead of the Canadian centennial.

Gray

In this it is in happy contrast with some of the other Western cities. Calgary may just get its Planetarium completed in time, but neither Regina nor Saskatoon will have much accomplished. The Saskatchewan capital has sunk $1,000,000 on the steel ribbing for its centennial auditorium and now threatens to call the whole thing off.

The costs of the auditoriums in both cities zoomed from an estimated $4,000,000 apiece to a tendered $7,000,000. Saskatoon is trying to cut its project down to financeable size. But Regina is content to stare at the rusting iron-work that now centres the centennial park like a pedestrian piece of op-art.

Lethbridge, however, has all its problems behind it except for those which will be created by the recalcitrant racists in the town. The Lethbridge project is a Japanese Garden, as attractive and imaginative a centennial project as any Canadian community has conceived.

It covers a 10-acre site on Lake Henderson on the southern edge of town. It is hard by the main highway into Alberta from the south and will undoubtedly prove to be one of the province's top tourist attractions. It was designed by one of Japan's most renowned architects, Dr. S. Kubo. Its three semi-circular bridges were imported from Japan but all the rock and shrubs are from the Lethbridge area.

The bridges have almost made Lethbridge off-limits territory for Ottawa politicos. The bridging material was imported at a cost of $60,000 from Japan, but before it could be moved onto the site, Lethbridge was presented with a bill for $16,000 in taxes and import duties. Thus the tax-gatherers were able to recapture all but $7,000 of the $23,000 contribution the Federal Government made toward the cost of the bridges.

But why, on the steppes of southern Alberta, a Japanese garden, the world's biggest Japanese garden, even, outside Japan?

Friendship

Basically, the idea is a gesture of friendship from the white majority of the Lethbridge area to one of its largest minorities. It might even be stretched a little and described as an act of apology to the Japanese Canadians for one of the most despicable chapters in our history—the ruthless expropriation of the property of thousands of Japanese Canadians living in British Columbia at the outbreak of the war with Japan.

By the hundreds, they were uprooted from their homes and moved inland and put to work in the market gardens of the prairies. And in a way, it was the Japanese who saved the economy of southern Alberta. They took on the despised stoop-labor jobs in the sugar beets, tomatoes, beans and peas. And they worked with such a will that it was not long before it was the Japanese who were the dominant factors in the sugar-beet, gardening and potato business of Alberta.

Not only in sugar beets. Successful Japanese business and professional men now play an important part in Lethbridge affairs. And for them the "Nikka Yuko" Japanese Canadian Friendship Garden is the most wonderful think that could have happened. It was a shock, therefore, to discover from those close to the project that it has had to ride an under-current of local opposition.

Resentment

There is, indeed, probably more unfriendliness toward the project than even they appreciate. The success of the Japanese in the Lethbridge-Taber area is resented. Some of the white majority does not hesitate to express resentment of the "Japs and the way they live." It is the same sort of resentment that is found against the Hutterites wherever these colonies are located.

And perhaps prejudice may run deeper in Lethbridge because of the omnipresence on the streets of both Hutterites and Japanese Canadians. Fortunately, it involves a dwindling minority. The hope is that the sheer beauty of the Japanese garden, and its attraction for tourists from all over, will eventually submerge the opposition to the project.

A good test will be the turnout on July 3, when the garden will be opened unofficially but with considerable formality, to mark the 60th anniversary of the foundation of the city. It will be opened not only as a beautiful park but as a beautiful gesture as well.

"HE'S GOT A LOT O' TIMBER WOLF IN HIM. NOTICE HOW HE LIKES TREES?"

Looking Back

From The Times of June 15, 1906:

MONTREAL—The Donaldson Line steamer Athenia arrived here today from Glasgow. Soon after leaving Glasgow, Captain McNeill made the discovery that he had no less than 26 stowaways on board, the record number for the port of Montreal. The captain said that they were of much higher grade than the usual run of stowaways, several of them being young professional men who had been unable to find an opening in Scotland and had taken this means of reaching Canada.

Letters

From History

To those of us familiar with the history of Canada, the political ideology of Mr. Daniel Johnson of the Union Nationale seems strange indeed for a descendant of the Parti Bleu.

The grandfather of Mr. Johnson's party tradition was the Honorable Sir Etienne-Pascal Tache, premier, receiver-general, and minister of militia in the Colonial government of 1865. He was of the following philosophy:

". . . The war of races found its grave in the resolutions of the 3rd September, 1841, (Act of Union), and I hope never to hear of it again. We are so situated that there must be mutual forbearance. This life is one of compromise. . . . If one member in a family insists upon having all his own way, there will be trouble. . . ."

Perhaps Mr. Johnson will mature with the responsibilities of public office and cease to talk rubbish.—Fiat Lux.

Gordon's Book

Canadians who are to the slightest extent interested in preserving Canada's independence owe it to themselves to read Mr. Walter Gordon's book, "A Choice for Canada." It will take about three hours of their time, but the understanding of the problem is so important that these will be the best three hours they ever spent.

A reading by each Canadian is so important because Mr. Gordon's Liberal opponents are deliberately misconstruing his message. They say he wants an inward-looking Canada; and this is just not true! He states time and time again that Canada must regain control of her economic affairs so that she can play a greater and more important role in international affairs.—David P. Reimer, No. 1, Briar Place.

Vivisection

I cannot stress too strongly my abhorence of vivisection, as practised all over the world today.

All vivisection is inflicting fear, torment, prolonged suffering, and the increasing of disease and death in God's living creatures, is evil and immoral and instead of helping us, will destroy us, because it is against God.

What we need is God-fearing physicians and surgeons; who minister to the body, soul and spirit of the individual, and we people need more faith in God and courage to co-operate with them.

A noted American psychiarist has said: "It is essential for the health of our society that we prevent cruelty. Especially important is the prevention of mental attitudes which gloss over and mystify cruelty, while in fact encouraging the spread of same."—(Mrs.) Sybil Blyth, 460 Chester St.

Lab Animals

With reference to a recent letter by Mrs. A. F. Davies on the subject of the protection of animals used in laboratory experiments, Mr. George Chatterton, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, asked the minister of justice several questions concerning this matter in the House of Commons. The minister of justice acknowledged that a brief had been received from the Council for Laboratory Animals under date of June 25, 1963. No committee had been set up by the government to deal with this brief and the department of justice was not considering any such legislation.—James Barr, 965 Trans-Canada Highway.

Martin's Rescue

The Globe and Mail

EXTERNAL Affairs Minister Paul Martin is being given the credit—or the blame—for persuading members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to defer until October their decision on whether or not they will move NATO's political directorate from Paris to Belgium.

Although the United States, Britain and West Germany took a strong stand for an immediate decision, it is still conceivable that on the eve of President Charles de Gaulle's visit to Moscow the three were not anxious for a further deterioration of their relationships with France. Such a deterioration would surely have come if the headquarters had been moved, and France would probably have taken further retaliatory steps. Mr. de Gaulle might well have decided to cancel at once and finally NATO rights to fly over France. He might have pulled France's 72,000 troops out of West Germany, leaving a gap in NATO defences. France's financial contributions to NATO would have been lost and the U.S. fuel pipeline to West Germany that crosses France would probably have been closed.

Considering all these various factors, as well as Mr. de Gaulle's trip to Russia on June 20, the big three may have felt that it served a purpose in their relations with France to seem to be accommodating Canada in agreeing to the decision to defer decision. It at least relieved them of the embarrassment of a direct accommodation.

Whatever the reasoning behind the move, most Canadians will feel that Mr. Martin took the proper position. The desire of the United States, Britain and West Germany to yield to pique and go after the irascible Mr. de Gaulle must have been close to irresistible; but nothing will be gained over the long haul by getting into a temper, however the old man's conduct may justify it.

Rule for Beauty

The most noticeable characteristic of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and especially the twentieth, is ugliness . . . At the root of the trouble is a lack of balance . . . We chase after a great number of desirable ends without any consideration how they affect one another or our surroundings . . . It is significant that whenever we are obliged to pay full attention to the laws of nature we produce things of great beauty, the aeropane for example, or the ship. Balance is a rule of nature and the natural world generally obeys it, and the balance we have to hold is between the natural world and civilization. There are far too many people measuring all human happiness and aspiration in terms of money and manufactured goods.

'Public Interest' in Strikes: Where Does It Really Lie?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — When speakers and writers hang their arguments on the public interest or on the rule of law or on the natural law or on what the Canadian people want or the Canadian people believe, they are usually looking for a club to beat somebody with, through the grace of an over-riding concept with which no one can quarrel.

Fisher

I like to remember that the word interest appears in politics in such phrases as "conflict of interest," "private interest," "enlightened self-interest."

Where lies the public interest? It lies in real or meaningful discussion, related to actual situations. Politics does not take place in a vacuum. The public interest is a concept, not a theory.

The first of its many facets is the relationship of theory to fact. We have much guff today about labor-management co-operation and about planning. I know something about labor-management co-operation or the lack of it.

So far labor-management co-operation is largely a device to hoodwink unions. In the absence of a government seriously setting about economic planning and the employment of resources and determined to take much of the decision-making away from Toronto, Montreal and New York, to locate it in Ottawa, labor-management co-operation from labor's point of view is an exercise in self-deception.

Let me put my views more bluntly. In present political conditions I am against labor-management co-operation. That which affects the working conditions of union members should be subject to collective bargaining and embodied in a collective agreement.

To support this position let us turn to an area where national unions and international unions have had country-wide negotiations for a long time under the federal jurisdiction—i.e. railroading.

There labor-management co-operation has been used as a device to sneak in changes in working conditions in the closed period of an agreement. We have a detailed documentation of one example of this: The Freedman Report and the transcript of the Freedman Commission.

Practically speaking, there are two areas in which labor-management co-operation has some meaning in the present scene and where it can fruitfully be discussed. I am talking about Canada, 1966, with a weak Ottawa, a weak government.

These areas are management rights and wages.

Management believes in the right to manage, a lovely slogan. But it should not be used to subvert the collective agreement in the closed period. Changes which affect the agreement must be subject to collective bargaining.

In the U.S., a union serves notice at any time, negotiations commence and lead on through bargaining, if need be to strike.

In Canada a union cannot do that. The change is made, bitterness accumulates, wildcats happen. To prevent this, labor-management co-operation comes into play: Secret discussions, mutual back-scratching, lunch at the Rideau Club or the Granite Club or the Montreal Club. The changes are made with a murky union acquiescence and the ties between union leaders and the rank and file are weakened.

In the wage area, labor-management co-operation runs the gamut from the individual case of management soft-soaping the union leaders into settling-for-less—and there is great pressure of an institutional kind built into most unions to get a settlement (and in Quebec the extra incentive to get the agreement closed and the unit protected)—to much broader ideas of setting wage increase ceilings for the whole movement.

How genuine is management talk about labor-management co-operation? Management organizations are preparing a major assault upon the Freedman Report. There will be a joint submission to the Commons labor committee from several powerful groups defending the alleged right of management to make whatever changes they wish in a closed collective agreement by changing techniques and methods.

Before management can be taken seriously on labor-management co-operation (whatever it means) it must first of all accept in good faith the established instrument of collective bargaining and not weaken it or destroy it with the principle that its rights over-ride all others.

Since 1952, the non-operating employees of the two biggest corporations in the country, the CPR and the CNR, confronted with the pattern of government interference since 1950 to prevent strikes in the public interest, have advanced two simple propositions before conciliation board after board:

1. Their wages should be determined by some outside standard of measurement.

2. That measurement, in some form, should be the "durable goods standards."

This makes a comparison of two groups of roughly comparable workers. The unions (and they total in their rail and off-rail membership about 250,000—one-quarter of the whole CLC) have said: Look, instead of having this thing go into a crisis every two years, let us determine our wages according to a measurement: let other workers—in and outside unions in durable goods—be the standard.

Now, every conciliation board since 1950 (two years before the unions took this position) has said: (a) there should be a standard; (b) this should be, generally, with adjustments, durable goods.

The railways, despite this tremendous accumulation of board jurisprudence, have refused to accept the standard and in 1964 finally rejected any standard of any kind. They would rather rely on the outcome of a crisis.

What is the result? Widespread disaffection, to the point of revolt, of railway workers; raiding by the Confederation of National Trade Unions of 10 rail unions in the past six months—and not only in Quebec—also Ontario and New Brunswick; the threatened breakdown of national bargaining units; the biggest wage demands ever served on the railways, an illegal strike vote, and a most ugly situation.

Do you expect railway workers and their unions could be convinced that management, and the government, believe in labor-management co-operation? When only the unions for nearly 15 years have tried for a consistent wage policy? Surely, you see who has had "the public interest" at heart.

Verwoerd Backlash Waited In Wake of Kennedy Visit

By STANLEY UYS

CAPE TOWN — In the ominous silence which has followed Senator Robert Kennedy's departure from South Africa everyone is waiting for the Verwoerd government's backlash.

Not since the then-prime minister of Britain, Harold Macmillan, made his "wind of change" speech in Cape Town six years ago have Dr. Verwoerd's Nationalists been so angry with a foreign visitor.

They could scarcely contain their rage as he rushed from city to city, ostentatiously shaking hands with non-whites, getting into earnest conclave with the opponents of apartheid, visiting the banned president of the National Union of South African Students, Ian Robertson, making a special helicopter trip to see ex-chief Albert Luthuli, the banned president-general of the African National Congress—and describing him as "one of the most impressive men I have ever met," and then taking the news of this encounter to the Africans of Johannesburg and telling them that race discrimination would have to end in South Africa.

South Africa has not heard this kind of talk since the Sharpeville shootings in March, 1960. The country has been stirred from a kind of slumber to hear a possible future president of the United States tell it to resume the struggle against apartheid.

Must Act

Obviously, all this is intolerable to Dr. Verwoerd, who must act now and quickly to check any possible ripple effect. His immediate target will be the National Union of South African Students, since Senator Kennedy addressed himself specifically to the youth, but there are various related targets—organizations, some active others quiescent, which might respond to the senator's call to action.

Senator Kennedy said specifically that the struggle should be peaceful and non-violent, but any kind of serious struggle against apartheid is under a ban in South Africa today.

The point about Senator Kennedy's four-day visit to South Africa is that it has caused a commotion, not only in some opposition circles, but also in government circles. Dr. Verwoerd's Nationalists are quarrelling among themselves over the handling of the visit. Some say it was bungled, and that once it had been decided to grant Senator Kennedy a visa he should have been allowed to see government leaders.

In this way they suggest the edges of the confrontation between Senator Kennedy and the Verwoerd government could have been blurred, and the senator might have pulled his punches just a little

The Nationalist right wing takes a different view; it says Senator Kennedy should not have been admitted, and that the experience proved that it is folly to try to placate international opinion by sacrificing bits of South Africa's "sovereignty."

One suspects that the Nationalist right wing had been strengthened by the experience, and that government attitudes will crystalise and harden now.

No other choice is possible for Dr. Verwoerd. Senator Kennedy's visit showed again that to talk of modifying apartheid is to propose a clash of mutually-exclusive opposites. There is only one direction in which apartheid can move, and that is to the right, and all challenges accelerate this process.

Consolation

The only consolation which the Verwoerd government can draw from the Kennedy visit is that the senator's message probably reached only a section of the white population—it is a long time, of course, since any white person knew what went on behind the enigmatic black curtain.

This is the difference between the senator's speeches and the "wind of change" speech. When Mr. Macmillan spoke in 1960 it was to a troubled South Africa, on the eve of Sharpeville, and when Africa was erupting into independence. The timing was right.

But Senator Kennedy comes six years later, bringing an even more urgent message. By now South Africa has its troubles under lock and key, and its citizens have drawn comfort from the mounting troubles of the independent African states to fortify themselves in their apartheid beliefs.

A Cocoon

South Africa today is like a cocoon which multiplies its layers every year. Senator Kennedy's message penetrated only a corner of this cocoon, but even then with Verwoerd's help the cocoon may heal this puncture like a self-sealing tube.

The sad fact is that South Africans less and less understands the language of the international community. Many of them, including apartheid opponents, shrugged off Senator Kennedy's speeches as just another attack on apartheid without being able to relate the speeches to the stature of the man.

A possible explanation is that the indigenous political vocabulary is so drenched in the idiom of violence that when a foreigner arrives and makes a restrained remark about apartheid being an "evil" which should be totally dismantled he is accused of being evasive.

Beyond Range

Another problem is that the concepts which Senator Kennedy brought with him are simply beyong the range of average South African thought. Isolationism has gnawed successfully at the nation's mind.

For example, Senator Kennedy told Stellenbosch students: "The world-wide contest of ideology, along with awesome developments in the speed, range and impact of modern weaponry, have made the very notion of isolationism obsolete. Even the traditional distinctions of diplomacy—between belligerents and neutrals, between external and internal affairs, between a state of war and a state of peace—are slowly losing their meaning."

The message Senator Kennedy thus brought to South Africa was that our official thinking was obsolete. He coined a phrase about "earth-bound man, clinging to the dark and poisoning superstition that his world is bounded by the nearest hill, his common humanity enclosed in the tight circle of those who share his town and views, and the color of his skin."

Feel Alone

"I know at times you must feel very alone with your problems and difficulty," said Senator Kennedy, "but each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centres of energy and daring, these ripples build a current which can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression."

This phrase, particularly, must have been noted by Dr. Verwoerd, who will certainly attempt to counteract what Senator Kennedy managed to inspire. Dr. Verwoerd is not prepared to sit idly by while even a section of South Africa's youth goes swinging with the senator.

Marshal Lin Piao: A 'King-Maker'?

By STANLEY KARNOW
The Washington Post

HONG KONG — Although Marshal Lin Piao, defence minister, currently looms as successor to Mao Tse-tung as leader of China, he may turn out to be a kingmaker rather than king.

He never has projected an image of himself as a hard, doctrinaire Communist. Nor has he ever been listed among the major ideological figures in Peking.

Thus some analysts here view Lin as not necessarily Mao's only heir. They see him more as the driving force within a tightly-knit collective leadership coming to the fore.

MARSHAL LIN

Lin, in his late 50s, has invariably been described as an able, gentle, studious man of unusual courage. He was, from all accounts, an excellent soldier.

Lin was born in central Hupeh province, the second son of a factory owner. (To suit Communist class lines, his occupation has been officially changed to peasant).

Though his father went bankrupt, Lin managed to attend high school. During his high school days, Lin made a stab at studying English under American Franciscan missionary, Father Robert Morris.

The priest saw the rising revolutionary in the years that followed. But in 1950, Father Morris was expelled from China along with other clergymen.

In 1925, when he was 18, Lin joined the Communist party and decided on a military career. As the Chinese Nationalists were then functioning under Soviet auspices, Lin enrolled in Chiang Kai-shek's Whampoa Military Academy in Canton. Upon graduation, he participated in Chiang's campaign against the northern warlords, and was soon promoted to captain.

When Chiang turned against the Communitst in 1927, Lin mobilized a column of troops and fled to Kiangsi province, frem where he led guerrilla operations against the Nationalists.

By 1932, he commanded the First Red Army Corps, numbering 20,000.

Break-Through

It was that unit, under Lin Piao, that broke through Nationalist encirclement and led the famous Long March of the Communists to Yenan in 1934. Lin's health reportedly suffered during the retreat.

In 1936, when he visited Yenan, the American writer Edgar Snow found Lin as president of the Red Army University, and improvised college conducted in bomb-proof caves. At that point, wrote Snow, Lin had fought in a hundred battles against the Nationalists without being wounded.

Three years later, fighting against the Japanese, Lin was wounded seriously enough to be sent to the Soviet Union for treatment. He recovered there and, according to some sources, participated in the Soviet Defence of Stalingrad.

After the Second World War, Lin's crack Fourth Field Army was almost everywhere in China fighting the Nationalists. It captured Hainan island in the south, then moved up to occupy the north-eastern provinces. When the Korean War erupted, Lin's troops were closest to the battle front. Thus it was Lin who commanded the Red China "volunteers" in Korea.

In 1959, when Defenee Minister Marshal Peng Teh-huai was dismissed, it fell to Lin Piao to take his post and begin a vast political reorganization of the Chinese armed forces.

That Lin has not been entirely successful in putting politics in command of the armed forces is evidenced by the continuing debate between professionals and ideologues within the military establishment.

A Boy's Economic Problem In This Affluent Society

By ART STOTT

The affluent society has brought an economic problem to our locality, I'm told.

When the boys, most of them junior secondary school age, have paid their admittance to the weekly lacrosse game, taken in a show and purchased their tailor-made cigarettes, they have to scrounge like mad to raise enough money to buy a gallon of gas for their outboards on Sunday.

Stott

This is a problem my generation escaped. At their age we smoked tailor-mades only on those occasions when respectful Chinese left Players loose on the graves of the cemetery at the point called "Feed-the-deads."

So nicotine wasn't much of an expense. Generally we waited until later in the summer, when the spirea blossoms had dried and turned brown. These we crumbled and rolled in newspaper. It didn't stop us smoking, but it was a deterrent.

Furthermore, we didn't have outboards. A boy of today's junior high age was lucky if he could borrow a rowboat from a friend or if his family owned one. Otherwise he contented himself with a dugout and the occasional ride or fishing trip in some adult's launch.

In the current era, as we worship at the shrine of materialism and mechanical advancement, it's natural enough that youngsters, emerging into their teens, should build for themselves or acquire what we used to call sea-fleas and power them with outboards. Our society is rich enough, also, to finance such acquisitions and such decorations of today's living as tailor-mades for juveniles. But the operating costs advance. So, too, do the opportunities for the boy to earn a dollar.

There always was, of course, the opportunity for a kid to make a dime or two when our generation was nudging past 12 years. He could spend the better part of an afternoon cutting lawns and earn 35 to 40 cents. He could take a child off its mother's hands for three or four hours and make anywhere from a quarter up. He could collect a gunnysack full of bark on the beach when kitchen ranges were wood-powered, and receive a nickel a sack. Or he might go berry picking in vacation season and make anywhere from 75 cents and up for a 10-hour day. That was saving money, though, not spending money. It went for something important, like next Christmas' presents to the family.

Child labor doesn't believe in that kind of exploitation any more. When I look at the boys with their outboards, I wonder if it believes in labor. Maybe the whole concept is a bit demeaning, like riding a bicycle when you reach the upper grades in high school and you need a jalopy.

Not that there aren't young businessmen now. You can contract out your lawn-cutting duties, if it grows too bothersome for you as an adult to walk behind the power mower. And you can get good workmen to handle the chore for you. Our lawn never looked better than when a friendly high school senior mowed it—and trimmed the edges—while we were on vacation in May.

Still, a young person now never has quite enough money. He never had before, but his wants were not so demanding. He did whithout his tailor-made cigarettes. He didn't have to buy gas to keep him moving afloat.

My sympathies go out to the junior high school boy of today, but for the wrong reasons, no doubt. I think he's deprived, not of gas-money but of something that seems precious to me in retrospect. When we were kids we learned to row a boat owned by the family or by a friend. By great good fortune some us achieved ownership of an inexpensive flat-bottom skiff, and with the sweat that rolled from us at the oars and penetrated the wood of our craft, we poured a certain spiritual essence into the small hull.

The boat became a part of us. In it we learned to ride the waves, buck the tide, and handle ourselves in rough weather. You were responsible for and to the boat you were using. It was responsive to you. A boy and a boat joined to form a unit almost mystical in nature. It's difficult for me to see the same union between today's youngster and contraption he pours gasoline into. But then there are some features of what people call progress which I don't understand very well.

Few of the 'Pieds Noirs' Still Remain in Algeria

By JOHN STEPHENS

ALGIERS—Once they were 1,000,000 in number, now they number fewer than 40,000—the "Pieds Noirs" (Blackfeet) of Algeria.

These were the people of European origin who formed the economic, cultural and political backbone of French Algeria. Most of them were French, or of French extraction. But there were also Spaniards, Italians, Maltese and even some Englishmen.

Some of the Pieds Noirs have stayed on, usually the older generation, disillusioned but unable to tear from a country where their families had lived for more than a century.

Others are carrying on with their jobs, hoping to save enough to retire to France, Few have come to terms with independent Algeria.

The nationalization of 7,500,000 acres of European-owned farmland by former president Ahmed Ben Bella drove the remnants of the 25,000 French farmers in Algeria either into the towns or back to France.

Some cling grimly to property in the cities, but even these are gradually selling out to raise funds to go to France.

Of those who have stayed, about 10,000 are technicians or skilled workmen, 250 are doctors, dentists, pharmacists, or lawyers, 2,500 are in business, and 1,200 are in church orders, usually teaching or nursing.

Another 2,700 are either retired or receiving public assistance of some sort, and intend to stay in spite of attempts to persuade them to return to France.

Almost all the poor Europeans, or "Petits Blancs" as they are called here, have disappeared. Bab El-Oued, which hummed with the talk of Spaniards, Frenchmen, Maltese and Italians, now is just another rather drab quarter of Algiers.

Recipe

Cheese Chili
(Makes 8 Servings)

¼ cup butter, 2 onions, thinly sliced, ½ cup chopped green pepper, 1 pound minced lean beef, 2 (15-ounce) cans red kidney beans, 1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 3-4 teaspoons chili powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups shredded Canadian processed cheese.

Melt butter in heavy frying pan. Add onions and green pepper and fry gently until just tender; remove from pan. Brown meat in remaining fat in pan. Drain and rinse kidney beans; add to meat mixture along with onion, green pepper, tomatoes, Worcestershire sauce, chili powder and salt. Simmer uncovered, stirring occasionally about one hour. Add cheese and stir until melted. Serve immediately.

Quiche Lorraine
(Makes 6 Servings)

1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell, 1½ cups shredded Canadian-made natural Swiss cheese, 8 slices crisp bacon, crumbled, 3 eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, ⅛ teaspoon dry mustard, ½ pint (1¼ cups) light cream.

Preheat oven to 375° F. Sprinkle cheese and bacon in prepared pastry shell. Beat eggs slightly; beat in salt, cayenne and mustard. Gradually stir in cream. Pour over cheese and bacon in pastry shell. Bake in preheated oven 40 to 45 minutes or until set—a knife inserted in centre should come out clean. Serve hot.

Recipe

Piping Hot Cheese Bread

(Makes 8 to 12 Servings)

1 large French loaf. Soft Butter.
3 cups (¾ pound) shredded Canadian cheddar cheese.
1 teaspoon prepared mustard.
2 tablespoons finely-chopped green onions.
Few grains nutmeg.

Preheat oven to 375°F. Slash bread into thick slices, almost through to the bottom crust. Spread cut surfaces with soft butter. Combine cheese, mayonnaise, mustard, onions and nutmeg. Spread on cut surfaces of bread. Place on cookie sheet. Bake in preheated oven until heated through—25 to 30 minutes.

Apple Crisp Squares

(Makes 10 to 12 Servings)

2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour. ¾ teaspoon baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt. ⅔ cup chiled shortening.
1⅓ cups shredded Canadian cheddar cheese.
¼ cup to ⅓ cup cold water.
¾ cup all-purpose flour. 7 medium apples.
½ cup lightly-packed brown sugar. 2 tablespoon lemon juice.
½ cup granulated sugar.
½ cup chilled butter. 1 teaspoon cinnamon.
¼ teaspoon nutmeg.

Sift together into a bowl the 2¼ cups flour, baking powder and salt. Cut shortening in finely. Add cheese and combine lightly. Sprinkle with water a tablespoon at a time, mixing lightly with a fork until mixture clings together but is not sticky. Chill well. Preheat oven to 450°F. Roll out pastry to fit a 9x12-inch jelly-roll pan. Core apples, but do not peel; slice into ½-inch thick wedges and arrange in rows on dough. Sprinkle lemon juice, combine granulated sugar and spice and sprinkle over apples. Combine the ¾ cup flour and brown sugar; cut butter in finely. Sprinkle over apples. Bake in preheated oven 20 to 25 minutes. Cut into squares and serve warm.

Good topped with sour cream-date-apple mix on whole wheat, on a cold meat platter or in sauces for sea food. A treat with pears or chicken salad on ham.

Emergency Session Called

AMSTERDAM (Reuters) — City police reinforced by elite royal constabulary and state police patrolled Amsterdam in calm today after two days of violent clashes which made a battlefield of the centre of the Dutch capital.

Parliament was called for an emergency session Thursday at the request of 10 members of the opposition Liberal party.

Construction workers who overturned cars and set them on fire at the beginning of the violence Monday were told that their protests have been refused by union officials.

The workers were demonstrating against a two-per-cent deduction from their vacation bonus for administrative costs. The unions said their bonuses will be mailed to them, minus the two-per-cent costs.

The two days of disturbances brought a warning from Prime Minister Joseph Cals that the violence would not be allowed to continue. "If it does, strong action will be necessary," he said.

U.S. BOMBING DRILL KILLS TWO IN THAILAND

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Two Thais were killed and a third injured Sunday by bombs dropped in a target practice area by a U.S. Air Force plane, the U.S. embassy reported Wednesday. The area in Lopburi, 96 miles north of Bangkok, had been declared a restricted area.

10-Year Study of Pill Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government researchers say they hope to launch a study of perhaps 20,000 U.S. women for at least 10 years to try and find out if there is any long-term danger in the prolonged use of oral birth-control pills.

The pills are being used by an estimated 5,500,000 women in the United States alone.

And the government, represented by the public health service's National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, has taken the first steps to explore whether a massive, controlled study among women using "the pill" or other artificial contraceptives, could be carried out.

The study—just getting under way—follows by more than a year of testimony by Dr. James A. Shannon, director of the National Institutes of Health, before a congressional committee, that until the question of any health hazard is settled, millions of women may be taking a chance by using the controversial pills.

However, neither Dr. Shannon, nor any other government health officials has recommended that use of pills be curbed.

Dealer Wins Court Case But Can't Collect Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — A British Columbia scrap dealer who argued and won his own ease before the Supreme Court of Canada went home out of pocket, the Commons was told Monday.

Nowhere in Canadian law was Charles Giardosi of Trail entitled to recover costs of travel and lodging or lost income, for his court battle, said H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West).

Mr. Giardosi and the B.C. government waged a duel for more than five years. He first appealed the 1961 expropriation of his property at Trail to an arbitration court and lost.

In the B.C. Supreme Court, he won. Highways Minister Gaglardi, for whose department the land was expropriated, took the case to the B.C. Court of Appeal and had the Supreme Court decision reversed.

When Mr. Giardosi took aim on the Supreme Court of Canada, the first lawyer he approached asked for $12,000 to take the case, said Mr. Herridge.

But the scrap dealer couldn't afford that, or estimates of $5,000, $4,000 and $850 made by other lawyers.

Mr. Giardosi read up on law, pleaded and won his own case. He was able to collect only about $100 for court costs, after having paid costs twice in earlier stages of litigation.

Solicitor-General Pennell said he is sympathetic and would talk to the minister of justice, who would have to initiate any changes in the act.

LEITERMAN
..... "have to fire me"

Seven Days Members Seek Jobs Elsewhere

TORONTO (CP) — Douglas Leiterman, executive producer of the CBC TV program This Hour Has Seven Days, says key members of the program's staff are seeking jobs outside the CBC — some of them in the United States.

Four-month contracts offered to his senior personnel are "a slap in the face," Mr. Leiterman said in an interview.

Co-hosts Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre have been fired from the controversial public affairs program and senior management has decided not to extend Seven Days contracts beyond September.

At least one Seven Days producer-director, Peter Pearson, has already left to join the National Film Board, said Mr. Leiterman. A second, Jim Carney, may follow him.

Mr. Watson said a job with the BBC was one of a "number of interesting possibilities" open to him, the others being in the United States.

Ken Lefolii, previously one of the major contributing producers to Seven Days, has not had his contract renewed and has left the program. He is writing two books, he said, neither about Seven Days.

Mr. Leiterman said he is carrying on a fight to save his program and there is no question of him resigning — "They'll have to fire me."

'Deep Freeze' Takes Over Mooncraft

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Surveyor I transmitted eerie, almost surrealistic, television panoramas of a sunset on the moon Tuesday and then shut down—halting perhaps forever its flow of photos.

Some pictures, made as the sun dipped slowly, showed a faint glow on the horizon which scientists at the U.S. jet propulsion laboratory said could indicate the moon has a light atmosphere. The gas could come from the sun or from the moon's interior.

In the distance were long horizontal streaks of light, possibly the sun shining on ridge tops. In the foreground was deep blackness, with tiny spots of light where rocks caught the sun's rays.

After the sun vanished, there remained faint illumination from the glow of earth 250,000 miles away. With this dim light Surveyor made a final shot—reminiscent of its first—looking downward at one of its three feet. The picture showed the foot clearly.

This first of six U.S. Surveyors, launched May 30 from Cape Kennedy, landed gently on the moon 63 hours later and in the days since has sent earthward more than 10,000 close-ups of the pebbled surface of the Sea of Storms where astronauts some day may land.

During the two-week lunar night the temperature will dip to 260 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, perhaps freezing Surveyor's battery. If this happens, it will send no more pictures. If the camera survives, more photos will be sought after the lunar sunrise.

Coming up next month is the first in the Orbiter spacecraft series, in which photos of the moon obtained from as low as 30 miles will be compared with Surveyor's in a continuance of the hunt for the best landing area for Apollo astronauts later in this decade.

NO ACTION BY COUNCILS

Greater Victoria municipalities won't be going into the pet crematorium business.

Tuesday the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health tossed into a "no action" file a recommendation from the SPCA that a $9,000 crematorium for disposing of animals be built.

"These people who complain about pets being burned on the garbage dump complain on strictly emotional conditions," said Ald. Art Mebs, Esquimalt.

"The complaints come from just a few genuine animal lovers — maybe eccentrics. This isn't a municipal responsibility. If people love their pets they should see their bodies are disposed properly after they die. For my part I can't see the difference between burning a pet on the garbage dump and burning it in a crematorium. The end result is the same."

Coun. Edith Gunning, Saanich, said she thought the crematorium a good idea but not economically feasible at present.

"There are some of us who think it a good idea, but it is the cost primarily that prevents it going ahead. We have to get a better garbage disposal system before we start talking about crematoriums."

Ald. Lily Wilson, Victoria, suggested that the people who complain about the present system could possibly get together and do something to solve the problem.

In the past animal lovers have complained that the bodies of dead pets are tossed on the garbage dump and left to rot.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, metro health officer, has denied the charge.

He repeated the denial Tuesday saying that the bodies of animals are burned along with other garbage and he stressed that there was no health hazard under the present system.

'JUNKIE SHIRTS A SICK JOB'

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuters)—One thousand T-shirts picturing a hypodermic syringe and the slogan "I'm a junkie" were destroyed by merchant Ralph Best Tuesday after a psychiatrist warned they could encourage drug-taking. The garments were described by Dr. John Owens, head of Birmingham's drug addiction unit, "as a sick job, opposed to everything we are trying to do."

Juveniles Charged In Break-In, Theft

Two juveniles have been charged with a break-in at McMorran's Coffee Shop, 5190 Cordova Bay, and the theft of two boats Monday night.

The boats, worth about $300 each, taken from near the shop, and goods worth $16 have been recovered, say Saanich police.

Centennial Record For Choirs Urged

The suggestion was placed before a conference of Centennial officials from Ottawa, meeting in the Empress Hotel Monday evning.

A Victoria man suggested that one choir from each province across Canada should make a three-minute tape and that the 10 choirs should then be recorded separately on a long-play disc.

John Fisher, commissioner of the Canada Confederation Centennial Commission, said the idea had merit but it would depend on whether a recording company would go to the trouble of organizing the best choirs from Atlantic to Pacific.

The suggestion has been forwarded to a Toronto recording company.

New Perjury Trial for Judge Supreme Court of Canada Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada rejected today an appeal by the Quebec justice department and upheld a lower court decision ordering a new perjury trial for Mr. Justice Adrien Meunier of Quebec Superior Court.

The Supreme Court reached its decision after less than one hour of argument by Marc Briere, counsel for the Quebec justice department. Lawyers for Mr. Justice Meunier did not even have to plead their case.

The five judges hearing the appeal retired for less than five minutes to discuss the case. When they returned, Chief Justice Robert Taschereau announced that the appeal was unanimously rejected because the reasons for it were unsatisfactory.

The Supreme Court upheld a two-to-one decision by the Quebec Appeal Court Oct. 22, 1965, which quashed the perjury conviction of Mr. Justice Meunier and ordered a new trial.

The Appeal Court found that the trial judge had exceeded his jurisdiction by ordering the accused to leave the court during discussions of a legal point.

Mr. Justice Meunier, former Liberal MP for Montreal Papineau, was convicted in October, 1964, on three counts of perjury and sentenced to two years in penitentiary.

In announcing the ruling, the chief justice said the Supreme Court agreed with the judgment of the Quebec Appeal Court, written by Mr. Justice P. C. Casey.

Judge Casey found that the accused has an absolute right to be present in court for his whole trial, unless his conduct is disorderly.

Judge Meunier was charged in 1964 with deliberately testifying falsely earlier that year at a pre-trial hearing conducted by Judge Claude Wagner, who later became Quebec justice minister.

The hearing investigated allegations by Montreal police that Judge Meunier, while still a lawyer and MP in 1962, had borrowed Crown evidence against one of his clients and failed to return it.

Shop Plaza to Face Criminal Code Count

Colwood Shopping Plaza, already fined $100 for polluting the area with waste water, will be charged again, this time under the Criminal Code.

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health Tuesday instructed health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread to swear out an information against shopping centre owners Tankoos Yarmon Ltd., and proceed with criminal proceedings.

Coun. Art Mebs of Esquimalt said he hoped that this time, if the company is found guilty, the fine would be substantial.

"If the fine is the same as last time they could go on indefinitely," he said.

Board chairman Reeve Gordon Lee of Central Saanich noted that the board had no control over the amount of the fine.

STERNER VIEW

Dr. Whitbread said he expected the courts to take a sterner view of the matter when the case is heard.

"The last time the charge was laid under the Health Act," he said. "This time we are proceeding under the Criminal Code on the advice of the attorney-general's department. I would expect the courts to take a much sterner view if the company is convicted."

The shopping centre's troubles stem from a coin laundry operation which discharges waste water into open ditches and has been blamed for creating stagnant pools of water on Colwood golf course.

Teachers Fired

DETROIT (AP) — The suburban Ecorse school board Monday night fired 194 teachers who have been on strike since June 3 in a dispute over a new contract.

There is a power that surpasses all human might. This power is capable of helping man on each step of his journey to eternity. It can calm a troubled heart and lift a weary spirit. For centuries, unbelieving men have denied this power exists... but they have passed on, and the power remains. It is still the hope of a meaningful life for every man.

This power is found in a life of service in Christ... a power for today! Tonight, Dr. Carl Spain will discuss one part of this power. You will want to hear his timely lesson on:

'Phone Manner Boosts Sales

By AB KENT
Times Business Writer

Success of an airlines salesman training course was attributed Monday to tape-recording incoming phone calls from potential customers.

W. R. Paull, manager of sales and traffic training for Canadian Pacific Airlines at Vancouver, told Victoria Sales and Marketing Club how his company boosted telephone sales.

He was guest speaker at a Red Lion Inn graduation dinner for 41 students of the club's sales and marketing management course at University of Victoria.

Mr. Paull said 95 per cent of airline business is done via the telephone, but the salesman must "sense the needs of people on the other end."

He said sales training programs conducted by CPA were not paying off in added sales.

Then he had the idea of tape recording the incoming calls of clients.

"What were the people on the other end saying that we were missing? We began to listen . . . All good salesmen are good listeners . . ." the speaker said.

It was discovered when the tapes were played back that a listener could "read other people's attitudes over the phone."

It was discovered that salesmen were doing a lot of talking, but not listening enough.

People who called in could be classified three ways: the buyer, the shopper and the person seeking information.

Mr. Paull said the latter were given prompt, accurate information and thanked for calling; the shopper was sold on the product; and the buyer, since he knew what he wanted anyway, was given specific answers to his questions and a little extra information.

During the first month of application, he said, 55 extra sales were initiated.

The staff had become "people-oriented instead of company-oriented," Mr. Paull explained.

He has served CPA in various managerial and supervisory capacities since joining the company in 1942. Although a native of Trail, he has lived in the four western provinces, for 16 years in Edmonton, and has worked in Europe, South America, Australia and the Orient for CPA.

Those completing the first-year course and given their Uvic evening division diplomas by dean of administration Prof. R. T. Wallace included top student Brian Palin, 1945 Casa Marcia, who received a special award.

A. F. Kiteley, Mrs. E. M. Knape, R. C. Kopperson, J. P. Lee, L. E. Lunde, L. R. McLeod, R. S. Martin, F. A. Mockford, H. H. Mossop, A. R. Owens.

JET NOISE MUFFLER

British Buy Rights

LONDON (CP)—Bill Benson, Canadian aviation engineer and test pilot, says he has sold part of the patent rights to his invention for reducing jet noise to a group of British companies whose names are to be disclosed later.

Benson, a British emigrant, who now makes his home in Toronto, said in an interview today he will receive an initial payment of $40,000. This may be increased to $100,000 if the British companies decide to take up patent rights for other parts of the world.

He also will receive consultant fees and royalties on all aircraft and engines which are produced with the use of his designs.

Benson, 38, claims his device, known as the rotorduct power system, can reduce jet engine noise by as much as 65 per cent.

FRENCH JET PURCHASE SETS POLICY

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

PARIS (CP) — Breaking a habit of buying British and American aircraft, the Canadian government announced Tuesday its first purchase of French medium-range jet communications planes.

★ ★ ★

Charles M. Drury, minister of industry and defence production who is heading an economic mission to France, told a press conference Canada is buying seven Mystere-20 fan-jet Falcons at a cost of $8,200,000.

★ ★ ★

The Mystere-20, built by la Compagnie Generale Aeronautique Marcel Dassault, conforms best of all to the needs of the defence department, he said.

Purchase of the eight-to-10 passenger planes marks the first purchase by Canada of French planes for her armed forces, the Canadian embassy said in a statement.

★ ★ ★

There has been French interest in possible purchase of the Canadian CL-125, useful for dousing forest fires, but Drury said the two projects should not be considered on a "tit for tat" basis.

★ ★ ★

Canada's purchase was strictly on merits, he said.

Drury said Canada has a policy of multilateral trade rather than seeking balanced bilateral trade.

Canada would buy from, for instance, Communist Czechoslovakia if "they offered a machine that conformed to our needs and nobody else did."

SPEED HIGH

The aircraft, with a top speed of 560 miles an hour, would be able to travel quickly to any part of the integrated functional commands, returning personnel to home bases, often in the same day.

The Falcons will replace Dakotas and Cosmopolitans, although some of the latter will remain in service.

Accidents Hurt B.C. More Than Strikes

Industrial accidents in B.C. last year cost 10 times the lost working days and involved four times as many workers as did strikes.

Figures from the Workmen's Compensation Board show 1,132,313 working days lost through job accidents. Labor department figures show strikes caused 104,430 lost working days.

The accident figure represents the number of days work lost by persons receiving compensation. It doesn't include men and women suffering job accidents but off work three days or less.

The number of injured receiving compensation was 27,362, compared with 6,755 workers who went on strike.

Of the working days lost through accidents where compensation was paid, 67 per cent resulted from accidents during the year, 26 per cent from 1964 and seven per cent from 1963 or earlier.

MORE UNRECORDED

A spokesman for the Workmen's Compensation Board said the time-loss figure would "be up considerably" if it included the time lost for job accidents where compensation isn't paid and off-job accidents and sicknesses.

The total number of injury cases reported to the board last year, for example, was 94,632—more than three times the number who received compensation.

Comparative figures for 1964 and 1963 also show accidents outstripping strikes in numbers involved and the resulting lost time.

In 1964, 9,503 British Columbians went on strike but 26,258 received compensation for accidents—and 87,827 cases were reported.

In 1963, 824 workers went on strike compared with 24,461 injuries covered by compensation—and a total of 81,828 injury cases.

Job accidents where compensation was paid caused 10 times the lost working days in 1964 and 44 times the lost working days in 1963 as compared with strikes.

Accident figures for last year, broken down by industry, show forest products lost 346,789 working days because of accidents where compensation was paid. This was 30.7 per cent of the total.

Construction and allied work was second with 217,938 lost working days, or 19.3 per cent, and general manufacturing was third with 149,708, or 13.2 per cent.

Astros Kayo Sandy

Houston's First Win Over Koufax Since April '63

Associate Press

Gentile's bat wasn't there, nor was Gentile, as Houston Astros defeated Los Angeles Dodgers and Koufax 3-0 Tuesday night.

But Gentile's replacement was, and he was a major factor in Koufax' first loss since April 30, a loss which snapped his eight-game winning streak.

Chuck Harrison, who took Gentile's spot on the Astro roster when the volatile first baseman was banished to the minors Monday, rapped a bases-loaded, two-run single in the sixth inning that broke up a scoreless battle between Koufax and young Larry Dierker.

Gentile was ordered to Oklahoma City of the Pacific Coast League after he slammed his bat against home plate and broke it Sunday in a game against Chicago Cubs.

Harrison's crucial single helped the 19-year-old Dierker to his first major league shutout and the Astros to their first victory over Koufax, now 11-2, since April 14, 1963.

FIRSTS ABOUND

The game also marked the first time the Dodgers had been shut out since last Aug. 8 and the first time they had been blanked by a right-hander at home since Sept. 27, 1964.

In other games, San Francisco Giants out-slugged Chicago 11-7, Cincinnati Reds blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0, Atlanta Braves whipped Philadelphia Phillies 11-6 and St. Louis Cardinals crushed New York Mets 9-2.

Bob Aspromonte added another run off Koufax with a homer in the seventh while Dierker stopped the Dodgers on five hits.

ABOMINABLE SLOWMAN

Stu Miller keeps running out of innings in his quest for a no-hitter.

Baltimore's abominable slowman finished up with three perfect innings as the Orioles rallied for a 2-1 victory over New York Yankees.

That gave the 38-year-old relief specialist a string of 6 2-3 hitless innings in his last three game-ending appearances.

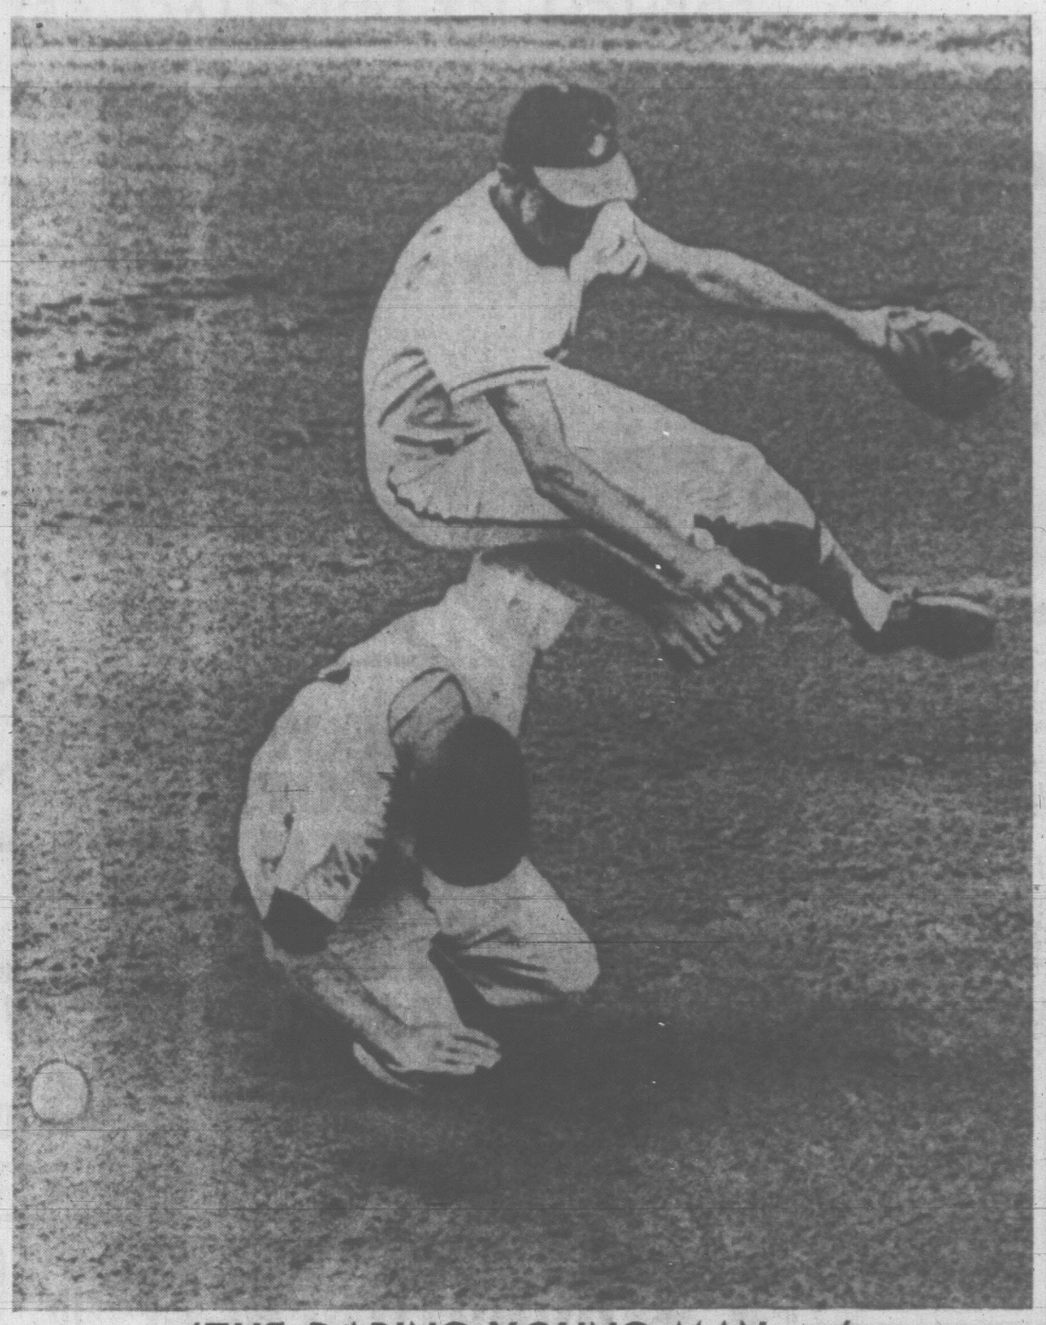
In Miller's limited repertoire, one pitch seems slower than the next. But he has seven saves and five victories so far this season.

The veteran righthander, who was 14-7 last year, has appeared in 23 of Baltimore's 58 games and has finished 14.

Baltimore's victory combined with Cleveland Indians' split against Boston Red Sox lifted the Orioles into undisputed possession of first place. Cleveland beat the Red Sox 8-7 in the first game as Fred Whitfield drove in five runs but dropped the nightcap 11-7 with George Scott hammering two homers for Boston.

Elsewhere, Minnesota Twins tripped Kansas City Athletics 6-3, Washington Senators ended an eight-game losing streak by beating Detroit Tigers 3-2 and California Angels clouted Chicago White Sox 10-4.

—Sonny Siebert, making his first start since pitching a no-hitter last Friday, was staked to an 8-2 lead in the opener against the Red Sox but needed help from Dick Radatz and Sam McDowell for his sixth victory. Whitfield homered and singled to drive in five runs.



'THE DARING YOUNG MAN . . .'

Poetry in motion is Chicago White Sox shortstop Luis Aparicio as he simulates ballet dancer to avoid New York Yankees' Bobby Richardson and fires ball to first base to complete double play. Yankees were out on scoreboard, too, dropping 2-1 victory to Orioles Tuesday night. (AP Wirephoto.)

Blake's Big Double Gives Carlings Win

Carlings strengthened their first place lead in the Senior "A" Men's Softball League Tuesday night by edging McLarens 3-2.

Leadoff hitter Jim Moody, making his first appearance of the season, set things rolling in the right direction for the winners by greeting McLarens' starter, Ken McCorkall, with a first-inning home run.

Carlings added two more runs in the second inning on a two-run double by Rick Blake.

McLarens came back later in the game but couldn't push a third run across. The losers scored once in the fourth on an error. They loaded the bases in the sixth but managed only one run on Keith Hunter's sacrifice fly.

DEWEY BANS DENVER PILOT

SEATTLE (AP) — Cal Ermer, manager of the Denver Bears of the Pacific Coast League has been suspended 10 days and fined $150, Dewey Soriano, president of the PCL, has announced.

Bo Osborne, a player for the Denver club, was fined $50 and suspended three days.

DONALDSON HAS 72

Vollmer Fires Six-Under 66

VANCOUVER—Two other players broke par, but with Wayne Vollmer it was a case of utter vandalism. He wrecked it Tuesday to inherit the lead at the half-way qualifying mark in the B.C. Amateur golf championships.

The defending champion, Vollmer sizzled the par 37-35—72 Capilano Golf Club course with a six-under-par 31-35—66. The 22-year-old University of Arizona student fired a par 72 Monday and held a two-stroke lead going into today's final two rounds of the 72-hole qualifying test.

Low eight scorers after 72 holes qualify for match play.

Vollmer, who felt he "shouldn't have been any worse than 70 on Monday," had a two-round total of 138. Lanky Doug Bajus of Capilano followed with 140 and Johnny Johnston of Marine Drive, the only other player to break par Tuesday, was next with 142.

DONALDSON 12TH

Victoria's only entrant, city champion Art Donaldson of Gorge Vale, came in with a par-matching 72 Tuesday. He had a 75 Monday and his 147 total was good enough for a share of 12th place heading into today's final two rounds.

Donaldson was two over par (37) for the first nine and then finished the tough back side with a two-under 35. It was the back nine that gave Donaldson all the trouble Monday. He took five bogeys on that nine in his first tour.

Victorians Ogle Pro Grid League

Decide Thursday On City Entry In Coast Setup

By HAL MALONE

Green Bay has its Packers, B.C. has the Lions. What about Victoria?

How does Victoria Timbermen catch you? Or Island Knights?

Would you believe Victoria Islanders?

Don't be shy. The problem of naming a Victoria team in the Pacific Football League could be a reality this week.

Directors of the Vancouver Island Football Association will decide Thursday night whether to become involved in minor league professional football.

If the directors pick up the ball, the Victoria team (Untouchables? Viscounts?) will host Seattle Ramblers here Sept. 17.

Vancouver businessman Robert Yanner, a franchise holder in the PFL, Tuesday night offered to move his team to Victoria providing Island interests, i.e., the VIFA had a "vested interest" in the operation.

$5,000 Available

Yanner would put up $5,000, recruit players and field the team.

The Island Association would find jobs for the players, provide a park, and handle season ticket sales.

The crux of Thursday's vote is financing.

To meet an estimated Association budget of $15,000 which Yanner described as "high," the Association would attempt to sell 2,000 season tickets (for five games) at $10 each.

Any deficit would be split by the Association and Yanner.

Manager Nominated

The final proposal was hammered out after a three-hour meeting between Yanner, his associate John Kerisman (Yanner's nominee for general manager) and four directors of the Association at the Dominion Hotel.

Originally the proposed Victoria entry was to be a venture involving Yanner, the Association, and a leading professional football team. But the latter was dropped from consideration when it wanted to put up trust monies, not its own. The professional team had begged anonymity lest it be accused of a conflict of interest in supporting a minor league club.

Cities represented in the Pacific League are Portland, Seattle, Eugene, Edmonds and Tacoma. Yanner operated the last two years at Vancouver; the team played out of New Westminster's Queen's Park.

Each team plays five home and five away games.

AFL Affiliation

Alderman Michael Griffin, chairman of the Recreation and Community Services committee, indicated the city would provide "at least" 2,000 temporary bleacher seats at Macdonald Park to augment the facility's permanent 800 seats.

Royal Athletic is scheduled to be ready Sept. 15.

Yanner said the Victoria team would consist of "20 to 25 Americans, mostly college players, and about 10 Canadians."

The PFL is working toward affiliation with the American Football League and would play under its rules.

Bruce Rothman of Portland is president of the PFL. Full time commissioner is Joe Huston.

Directors of the Island Association were extremely confident that 2,000 season tickets could be sold.

"Casually canvassing people on the street," said one director, "I found I could have sold 200 easily."

Whether ALL the directors are prepared to take the dip will be known late Thursday.

MEET WESTMINSTER

Rocks Hoping To Open Road

Doug McRory thinks he has big problems?

The New Westminster coach should take a look at the troubles that enmesh Bert Bertoia, pilot of Victoria's Inter-City Lacrosse League club.

Comparison of problems is probably best found in league standings. McRory's Salmonbellies, national champions last year, have an even record of five wins, five defeats and a tie. Bertoia's Shamrocks have two victories and nine losses.

McRory, who sends his 'Bellies against the Rocks tonight at Memorial Arena, says he may bench three or four of his veterans tonight.

"Since they won the Mann Cup," says Doug, "they don't seem to think they have to work hard. Some of them aren't giving out and I think it's time to see if some of the young fellows can do the job."

SWITCH IN SYSTEM

Highest on Bertoia's trouble list is the lack of scoring punch.

Shamrocks have scored only nine goals in their last two games and Bert will be trying a new attacking system when action starts tonight at 8, hoping to open up the road to the Westminster goal.

"It's hard to explain," Bertoia said today of his new system, "but we hope to get the forwards moving more and leaving more room in front of the goal. You could see our defencemen getting more scoring chances."

Lonnie Restall, bothered by a back injury, will sit this one out and junior Ron Zilkie will step into the Irish lineup.

While Bertoia and McRory were pondering their problems Tuesday night, Coquitlam Adanacs added another two points to their league lead.

Adanacs hammered out a 15-8 victory before about 1,100 Vancouver fans to move five points ahead of Vancouver and seven in front of Westminster.

City Swimmer Wins Dual Oregon Honors

MONTY HOLDING
. . a true Webfoot

EUGENE Ore. — Dual honors were awarded University of Oregon swimmer Monty Holding this season.

Holding, a junior from Victoria, was selected as most valuable varsity swimmer and elected team captain for the 1966-67 season by his teammates. He was high point man for the Webfoots for the past season and scored 11¼ points in the AAWU championships.

Holding was fifth in the 1650-yard freestyle, took seventh in 200-yard butterfly, was eighth in the 500-yard freestyle and swam on the 800-yard freestyle relay team, which placed sixth.

The physical education major is co-holder of the school 200-yard butterfly record at 2:03.9.

Hockey Friends? Fergy Has Them

They'll remember Fergy McPherson at Portland Saturday night.

McPherson, former Nanaimo player and head coach of the Victoria Minor Hockey Association before moving to Portland two years ago to take a position in the Rose City minor puck system and work at an electrician, is a fellow in need of friends.

Driving home from work on April 17, Fergy was involved in a highway accident. He almost died from extensive injuries, spent six weeks in hospital and is now confined to a wheel chair.

His next payday is a long way away and medical bills keep mounting.

NINE BUCKS

On the Portland team will be nine members of the Buckaroos who lost in the Western Hockey League final to Victoria Maple Leafs — Art Jones, Jack Blonda, Arnie and Cliff Schmautz, Jim Hay, Doug Messier, Gerry Goyer, Arlo Goodwin and Don Head.

With the Victoria players, travelling at their own expense, will be Andy Hebenton, Sandy and Fred Hucul, and Bob Barlow of the Leafs, and former Victoria Cougar Doug Anderson, now coaching the University of Victoria team.

From Anderson's Uvic Vikings will be Mike Woodley, Brian Whitten, George Fuller, Mike McAvoy and Dave Ferguson. Others will be Dave Woodley (Niagara Falls Flyers), Gary Schall (Muskegon Zephyrs), Dave Halme (Melville Millionaries), Wayne Anderson and Gordie Strongman.

Other Victoria friends of McPherson are invited to make the trip to Portland with the Victoria club. Those interested may obtain further information from Bob Reid at 385-8951. Organizers believe expenses for the weekend trip would not be more than $20.

The Victoria team leaves Saturday at 6 a.m. and returns at 9:45 p.m. Sunday.

Draft Could Liven NHL Parley

MONTREAL (CP)—The National Hockey League annual meeting moves into its third day today with the scheduled internal draft expected to provide more player changes than the last two days of activities.

New York Rangers, who finished in sixth place in the standings this year, are permitted to protect 20 players plus three netminders. Boston Bruins, fifth-place finishers, are allowed to protect 19 players and three goaltenders and the remaining four clubs can only protect 18 players and three goalies.

Only one trade has been announced in the last two days. Montreal Canadiens and the Rangers completed a two-for-one deal with Gordon (Red) Berenson going to New York for Ted Taylor and another player as yet unnamed. Both Taylor and Berenson are considered utility forwards.

Other announcements made at Tuesday's session included a decision by Bill Hay of Chicago Black Hawks to retire; a move by Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs to hold on to all-star defenceman Carl Brewer and still protect 18 players; Boston Bruins' re-purchase of Wayne Connelly of Rouyn, Que., and some appointments by the Black Hawks.

The league's board of governors upheld a bid by Imlach, Toronto's general-manager, to hold on to Brewer and still allow him to protect 18 other players for today's draft.

The governors concurred with an earlier decision by NHL president Clarence Campbell that no players who is a professional can be placed on the inactive list unless he has been out of action for one year.

Imlach earlier had requested that he be allowed to transfer Brewer from the Leafs' reserve list to the Toronto inactive list under an NHL bylaw governing players attending university. Brewer is attending the University of Toronto.

Brewer becomes eligible under the new ruling since he walked out of the Leafs training camp at Peterborough, Ont., last fall and did not sign a contract before the season ended.

Arthur M. Wirtz Sr., chairman of the Hawks, announced that both general - manager Tommy Ivan and coach Billy Reay had signed contracts which cover "a period of years."

Wirtz Sr. also announced that William W. Wirtz was named to succeed the late James D. Norris on the NHL board of governors for the Black Hawks.

Ivan has been with the Hawks since 1954 and Reay will be starting his fourth season as coach.

In other business, the governors decided to move the 20th annual all-star game from its customary pre-season slot to Wednesday, Jan. 18.

The game will be played in Montreal and will feature the defending Stanley Cup champion Canadiens against the all-star teams selected at the end of the first half of the 1966-67 season.

This will be the first time the all-star game will be played in mid-season. In 18 of the previous years it was played prior to the start of the season, while in 1948 it was played in Chicago just after the schedule got under way.

The Rangers completed plans to play pre-season exhibition games against the Canadian national team in Winnipeg Oct. 7 and 9 and in Calgary Oct. 8.

The league also announced that the reverse draft scheduled for Thursday has been moved up to today and will follow the internal draft.

This was made possible after the league cancelled the minor league draft session Tuesday.

VANCOUVER—Somewhat astounding is the fact that only one (1) golfer from Victoria thinks enough of the game to enter the B.C. Amateur championships.

DOUG BAJUS

It didn't go unnoticed at Capilano Golf Club in Vancouver, where this year's meet is being held this week.

Les Milne, who has been the manager of B.C.'s junior teams for the past three years, was one of several Vancouver executives who expressed disappointment at the lack of interest from Victoria's corner.

The Island is represented, by actual count, by only two threats—Art Donaldson of Gorge Vale and Nanaimo's Bob Hogarth.

In fact, there are more Americans seeking the B.C. championship than Islanders. The field at Capilano includes a half-dozen golfers from the Seattle area, including PNGA-bound Orrin Vincent and Mike Evans.

Mjlne, acting as scorekeeper this week, feels Hogarth "has the right attitude." The 18-year-old Nanaimo belter checked in with a 74 Monday, a commendable rain round, and scored a 78 Tuesday.

"Hogarth is too old to make the junior team this year, but people are taking notice of him. He can score in the 80s the rest of the way, but some will remember him for the 74.

"The thing is he's getting valuable experience."

Lanky Doug Bajus, listening from another corner of the room, added: "Besides, how often is a golfer going to get to play four rounds on a course like this (Capilano) for only $10?"

"I can get from my front door to Capilano in just over three hours," said Donaldson. "That's why it is all the more ridiculous more Victorians, especially some of the good, young ones, didn't enter.

"Seventy-two holes of golf on Capilano would do more for a golfer's game than two weeks in the bullpen (practice fairway)."

That's why I always liked Bill Wakeham. He was never the most popular fellow to walk a fairway in Victoria, but he was one of the best. That's because he never missed a chance to play in a tournament.

Wakeham packed away more tournament experience in seven years as an amateur than most do in a lifetime.

Although the emphasis is on the amateurs this week, there is plenty of early interest being displayed in the B.C. Open, a $7,000 affair which gets under way next week at Point Grey.

That's Dick Munn's course and the former Cedar Hill pro could be a big threat for first-place money of $1,450 and, more important, an automatic qualifying berth to the $200,000 Carling World Open.

The B.C. Open officially heralds the start of Canada's first "Summer Tour"—a cross-country circuit of six consecutive events, five provincial opens and the Millar tournament in Toronto.

Unofficially, the tour gets under way this week in Calgary with the second annual Willow Park pro-am.

Among the players ready to compete for the B.C. Open are Munn, Stan Leonard, Lyle Crawford and the rest of the Vancouver clan; Cedar Hill's Bill Goldsworthy, U.S. challengers Al Mengert, Al Feldman and Bob Duden, and eastern threats Al Balding, Wilf Homeniuk, Alvie Thompson, Moe Norman and Bob Panasiuk.

It adds up to a classy field.

Workers, Greaves Play Vital Series

League-leading Greaves and fast-climbing Transports, two solid teams who are threatening to make it a two-club race in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League, will clash tonight and Thursday night at Hampton Park.

Greaves lead the pack at the moment on a percentage basis, but Transports who have won two more than Greaves and lost one more, hold a one-half game edge in the won and lost column.

The Workers had to score three big runs in the final frame to secure a 3-3 tie with Kings in a game that was cut off by darkness in the eighth.

McAVOY BIG GUN

Catcher Mike McAvoy was the man of the hour for Transports, clearing the saturated bases with a double in the eighth to erase a 3-0 deficit.

McAvoy, who pitched a one-hitter Sunday against Chemainus to provide Transports with their seventh consecutive win, shone defensively as well. The strong-armed youngster gunned down three runners attempting to steal second base.

Kings' pitchers John Knowles and Gerry Macadam yielded only three hits during the tied contest that is scheduled to be replayed in its entirety at a late date.

Greaves' lefthander Les Brice will challenge Transports tonight at Hampton Park at 6:30. Transports will play behind either Art Worth, John Yankoski, or Gord Strongman in the first of two key contests.

NICKLAUS FAVORED

Rivals in Open Like That Lob

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jack Nicklaus was the favorite going into Thursday's opening round of the United States Open golf tournament even though the Olympic Country Club layout doesn't figure to be his kind of course.

"If there is a favorite, it has to be Jack," said defending champion Gary Player, the little South African who is gravely disturbed about his game.

"It's going to be won around the greens, not on driving," said Arnold Palmer. "And Jack is going to be on more greens than anyone else."

"Those greens are very small, and very hard to hold," Player said. "Jack has that soft lob shot that will hold."

Palmer agreed. "Jack has the highest shot in golf. It could make the difference."

The field of 133 professionals and 38 amateurs faces four rounds over a course that has been extremely trying in practice rounds.

"If you're off the fairway, you're in trouble," Nicklaus said. "You've got to stay on the fairway, but you've still got to be long enough."

The fairways are very tight and lined by dense growths of trees, giving them the appearance of tunnels. The greens are tiny.

The course is laid over hills. But it's more than up and down. It also writhes from side to side.

"It places a premium on accuracy," said Player.

Ben Hogan, a four-time winner, was extended a special invitation to attend. But another old, familiar face is missing. Sam Snead failed to qualify and will be missing his first Open since 1937.

Teamsters Ready To 'Free' Players

CHICAGO (AP) — A drive to organize professional football players, in the wake of merger of the game's two major pro leagues, has been ordered by James Hoffa, Teamsters' Union president.

Hoffa was quoted Tuesday in an interview in the Chicago Dily News as saying players will "be like slaves" with agreement of the National Football League and American Football League to form one circuit by 1970.

Hoffa, here for a quarterly meeting of the Central States Drivers Council, said the drive would be conducted by Harold J. Gibbons, St. Louis, head of the Teamsters' professional athletes division which has long-range plans to organize pro athletes in all sports.

Minor Hockey Officers Prefer Two Ice Centres

Victoria Minor Hockey Association Monday reiterated its support for two small community centres in Saanich rather than one large complex.

An Association spokesman said "we feel two small centres could be built for the cost of one if there are no frills. We are strongly for functional facilities, not a single grandiose scheme."

Half of the Association's 700 members, executive and players, live in Saanich.

UNANIMOUS VOTE

Noting the Association originated the two-facility concept, the spokesman said newly elected officers Monday added their unanimous approval for the project.

The spokesman said he believed two small centres — "ice surface and dressing rooms" — could be built for "about $200,000 each."

Parks and Recreation committee chairman Edward Lum has "roughly estimated" the cost of a single major complex at $1,500,000.

Lum has received more than 500 letters supporting a civic centre and sports complex in Saanich.

Proponents of the two-facility scheme, one in Burnside, the other in Gordon Head, claim they would better serve the vast municipality.

"You could be 10 miles from one giant sports centre in Saanich depending on where it is built," the spokesman said.

But, he added, no matter what form the ultimate scheme takes the Victoria Minor Hockey Association will support it.

"We won't sulk if we don't get our way," he said. "We'll co-operate with the municipality in every way."

TESTS AT GAMES

Olympics Reveal Cardiac Problem

HANNOVER, Germany (AP)—Medical tests of 788 athletes who participated in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics have revealed that almost 10 per cent suffered from a chronic cardiac disturbance known as intermittent heart block.

Dr. Joseph B. Wolffe, chairman of the Olympic Medical Archives Committee, said Monday that the disturbance found in 74 of the athletes had no apparent effect on their performances at the games.

NOT ORGANIC

Wolffe, who is with the Vally Forge Medical Centre and Heart Hospital at Norristown, Pa., said none of the 74 showed any clinical evidence of organic heart disease. Intermittent heart block, he said, is congenital and distinguished by irregular contraction of the heart chambers.

Heart block can only be detected by electro-cardiogram and manifests itself by occasional heart palpitation but no disabling effects.

As recently as 10 years ago, Wolffe said, physicans viewed the symptoms as serious and in some cases advised a decrease in activity. But it has been found that palpitations are experienced less frequently when a person engages in sports.

The heart block phenomenon still is under study. With the recent formation of the Olympic Medical Archives and the "accumulation of reliable life-long medical records of Olympic contestants, a vast reservoir of material would be available upon which authoritative opinions may be based."

The archives' first statistical report has been compiled based on the study of 1,121 athletes from 23 nations who participated in the Tokyo Olympics. The total includes the 788 whose electro-cardiograms were analyzed.

Another 15 nations have since joined the project, which is being conducted by volunteers from the participating countries with the co-operation of the International Olympics Committee and other world groups.

The athletes involved are to be studied throughout their lifetimes and future Olympic participants will be included in the project.

WHY THERE COULD BE A SHORTAGE OF DAIRY FOODS IN CANADA

In Canada, one of the world's great agricultural countries, it is ironic that there could be a shortage of milk.

One of the main reasons for this is that each year an average of 10,000 dairy farmers are leaving the business.

Despite increased efficiency, high costs of operation, equipment and feed are forcing dairy farmers out of business. Nearly all farm expenses have increased while the price of dairy foods has remained fairly constant.

There is a serious shortage of farm labour. More and more farm workers are attracted to other industries where they can work fewer hours for more pay.

If dairy farmers continue to leave the business at the current rate, there could be a serious shortage of vital dairy foods in Canada. The dairy industry is important to Canada's economic and nutritional health. And dairy foods are still one of your best food values.

Short-Shorts Win Ascot Leg Race

LONDON (AP) — The thigh-high skirt made its first appearance at Royal Ascot Tuesday — and appeared to be a winner. A few of the short-shorts even got into the august royal enclosure.

Ladies' legs, in fact, attracted almost as much attention as did horses' legs. Says fashion writer Denis Foley in The Evening News:

The four days of Royal Ascot racing make one of the world's most colorful outdoor shows and Tuesday's opening was more colorful than most by the excellent weather. The sun was shining and the temperature was in the mid-70's.

The show got under way with the procession of five carriages.

In the first carriage with the Queen and Prince Philip, Lord Snowdon, husband of Princess Margaret, and the Duke of Beaufort, the Queen's master of horse.

Princess Margaret, the Queen Mother and their escorts were in the second carriage, while in the third were Princess Marina, the Duchess of Kent, Princess Benedikte of Denmark and their escorts.

Behind them came Princess Grace of Monaco former U.S. film star Grace Kelly, her husband, Prince Rainier, and former U.S. ambassador and Mrs. John Hay Whitney.

YOUNG MAN attired in morning coat and grey topper and his girl friend, wearing a short, short skirt, listen to a gatekeeper tell them they can't enter the Royal Enclosure at the opening of four days of Royal Ascot racing in London. The reason wasn't the short skirt . . . they didn't have proper tickets. (AP Wirephoto.)

The Big Hunt Is On For Museum Exhibits

By HUMPHRY DAVY

One of the biggest roundups of living creatures in the history of the province is in full swing in B.C.

Provincial museum scientists and wildlife experts are collecting everything from moose to scorpions for eventual display in huge dioramas to be set up in the new $7,000,000 Centennial Museum in Victoria in 1967.

Rocks, soil, various types of sand, limbs of trees, insects, flowers, grasses, reptiles, rodents and deer from various regions of B.C. are being shipped to Victoria for storage or stuffing and mounting at a Yates Street museum workshop.

STILL MOVING

Some of the display material arrive "live," such as three rattlesnakes, salamanders and pocket mice.

The pocket mouse from the Okanagan Valley is a small rodent which stores its food in two pockets on the side of its cheeks.

Erik Thorn, display chief, who is in charge of planning and setting up the tableaus, said the field workers are concentrating on material from the dry region of the province.

The specimens from the various dry, wet, alpine and sub-alpine belts of the province, will be displayed in tableaus depicting the animals in their natural environment, he said.

"But we'll still have to collect lots of material," he said. "It may be years before we have all the animals we want."

NEED SEA LION

Experts have yet to get a sea lion, various species of porpoises, dolphins, whales and an elephant seal.

An elephant seal may take years to acquire as they are rarely seen in B.C. waters. It weighs about 2½ tons. The male has a long inflatable snout, and in old specimens, the skin about the chest and shoulders is deeply cracked and wrinkled.

From mountainous regions, experts hope soon to get a mountain beaver, a brown lemming and a pika, a small animal slightly smaller than a guinea pig.

Since museum officials started to make an inventory of their stock for the new museum, they have also discovered they are short of material from the culture of interior Indians.

INTERIOR NEGLECTED

"The Interior Indians seemed to have been neglected," said one official. "We have thousands of items from the coastal Indians, but scarcely anything from the interior tribes."

"So you see, this business of collecting is not an easy one," he added. "It's going to take time."

Guild Wants $185 A Week City Subsidy

In a letter to city council guild secretary Vera E. Rawlings points out that Bastion Theatre Studio already receives a subsidy of $185 a week from the city. She suggests that the same amount should be paid the guild

The city has made two attempts to persuade the Intermunicipal Committee to share the Bastion grant but the other municipalities have been cool to the idea. The matter is still tabled at the intermunicipal level.

SHARP ATTACK

In the application for $185 from the city the guild also launches a sharp attack on the Bastion group.

Noting that when it was formed three years ago Bastions' aim was to provide the city with professional theatre, the guild adds: "Now that three seasons of Bastion Theatre Studio's activities are behind us, it would appear that despite very generous financial support from city council in the way of special subsidies, little progress has been made towards the stated aims previously referred to."

The letter also pointed out that the guild has been in operation for 34 years and plays to audiences ranging between 6,000 and 10,000 each year.

COAST THREATENS

A recent Food and Agricultural organization study describes the southernmost 1,000 miles of Chile as "a coast . . . as inhospitable as is to be found on the globe."

Saanich Will Publicize Fire Department Survey

A report by an official of the fire marshal's office into the Saanich fire department will be made public.

"There will be no attempt to withhold the report from the public," Coun. Alan Newberry, chairman of council's fire committee, said Tuesday night.

His comments followed a fire committee meeting which was informed that Ernest Rickey of the fire marshal's office will complete his survey this week.

When the report is written it will go to the fire marshal who will send it to Saanich.

Coun. Newberry said it would be possible for the fire marshal's official to recommend a structure and training program in whih promotion can be made to fire chief from within the department in the future.

Mr. Rickey's terms of reference are to evaluate and report on the structure and organization of the department and to:

- Report on the location and complement of existing fire halls;
- Recommend any changes in the present organization and structure of the department including proposals for the training of personnel;
- Estimate future requirements with respect to personnel, equipment and any additional fire halls;
- Make any further recommendation deemed advisable to provide an adequate level of fire protection and emergency ambulance service for the municipality.

Eaton's to Expand, Asks Zoning Change

A public hearing will be held in Saanich into rezoning application for a warehouse and retail store for the T. Eaton Company near the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

At the same time, Farmer Construction has withdrawn an application for a warehouse at Oak Street and Valley Avenue.

Both sites were reported in The Times six weeks ago as possible locations for second outlet for Eaton's, supplementary to the downtown store.

Doug Sutcliffe, chief of B.C. operations for Dominion Construction, told council Tuesday night the distribution and retail sales centre is not speculative.

Mr. Sutcliffe said he had talked to the highways department, which would have to approve the application in addition to Saanich because it is within half a mile of an intersection with an arterial highway.

Highways officials had told him they are not in a position to say where the planned Patricia Bay Freeway will finally be located.

TRAFFIC STUDY

Last year's metropolitan traffic study recommended the freeway swing off Douglas Street just south of Swan Lake and cut behind the Town and Country Shopping Centre to link up with the city's Rose-Blanshard extension.

Prospect Petition Gets Nod

Saanich will press ahead with the Prospect Lake watermain local improvement petition with 1964 figures plus 10 per cent for increased cost.

This was recommended by the public works committee Tuesday night after municipal engineer Neville Life said his department is "swamped with work" and unlikely to be able to bring out new figures and plans until the fall.

Committee members agreed there should be no delay in the petition, and said residents should be advised of the costs (plus 10 per cent) of the 1964 petition which failed to gain enough signatures.

The committee also instructed municipal staff to circulate the petition not later than the end of August.

$53 A YEAR

Mr. Life said the average cost for property owners of extending the watermain from its present terminus near the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory would be $53 a year, plus the difference in costs between 1964 and 1966 — perhaps 10 per cent.

JOHNSON, LESAGE SET CHANGE-OVER

'UN Day' Thursday

QUEBEC (CP)—The government of Quebec will be handed over to Union Nationale from Liberal control Thursday, the two party leaders said following a three-hour meeting Tuesday.

Premier Jean Lesage said he will hand his resignation to Lieutenant - Governor Hugues Lapointe at an unspecified time Thursday morning.

Daniel Johnson, leader of the Union Nationale, said he will be sworn in as premier at 2:30 p.m. EDT Thursday.

The Union Nationale won 55 seats in the provincial general election June 5, the Liberals won 51 and two independents were elected.

Mr. Johnson said he will make public the names of his cabinet half an hour after the swearing-in ceremony.

The two leaders announced the next session of the legislature will open Sept. 8.

At a press conference after the meeting, Mr. Johnson said he advocates the abolition of the legislative council, Quebec's upper house, "even though it is made up largely of Union Nationale members."

Quebec is the only province in Canada which still has a separate upper house.

JOHNSON'S ACTIONS, GOALS MAY SHAKE OTTAWA

Separatists Have Now Tasted Blood

By CLAUDE HENAULT

QUEBEC (CP)—The recent election upset in Quebec has changed that province from an exclamation point to a question mark.

Ever since the June 5 election toppled the Liberal government and eased in the Union Nationale party, the results have been undergoing analysis.

The Union Nationale won 55 seats, the Liberals 51. Two independents were elected.

Questions for which answers are being sought are:

—What is the significance of the separatist vote, which picked up 8.7 per cent of the total vote although separatist did not contest all 108 ridings?

—How will the election turnover affect the shaky relations between the province and the federal government of Prime Minister Pearson?

—Why did the Liberal government of Premier Jean Lesage go down to defeat at the hands of the Union Nationale and its leader Daniel Johnson?

The three questions all seem to be linked to one major point: How much autonomy does Quebec want and what rights will it seek from the federal government?

LEAN THAT WAY

On the subject of separatism, election results indicate Quebecers are leaning strongly in that direction, although not one separatist candidate was elected.

Two separatist parties campaigned. These were le Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale and le Ralliement National.

The RIN campaigned on a platform of outright separation from the rest of Canada and gleaned 5.5 per cent of the vote although it ran only 73 candidates in the 108 ridings.

In the ridings it contested, the RIN picked up 7.5 per cent of the vote and this percentage rose to 9.3 in the Montreal area, long the seat of separatist strength.

The RN, offering "associate state" status for Quebec, garnered 3.1 per cent of the vote on 90 candidates.

BOURGAULT
. . . RIN leader

The other part of this party's platform was Social Credit economic theory and because of this most of its vote came from rural areas which already have sent Creditistes to the federal Parliament.

THEIR FIRST TRY

Important in assessing the separatist vote is the fact both parties were contesting their first election and that at least one of them, the RIN, had stated before the election that it did not really expect to elect a single representative.

This election was intended by separatist to be a "trial balloon." Afterwards RIN Leader Pierre Bourgault said his followers now have "tasted blood" and are aiming at the next provincial elections.

They fell from 56.4 per cent of the vote in the last election (1962) to 47.4, a decline of 9 per cent. This compares with a fall of only 1.4 per cent by the Union Nationale, which campaigned on a much more autonomist and nationalist platform.

Quebec nationalism therefore seems to be in and the question is: How will this feeling affect the province's relations with the rest of Canada?

Union Nationale Leader Daniel Johnson has said that he will demand greater autonomy for the province at federal-provincial negotiating sessions.

However, federal officials have said they will be less likely to back down before Mr. Johnson's stand than they were before that of Mr. Lesage.

On the surface, it seems that the federal and provincial governments are going toward a head-on crash, with Quebec taking a hard line.

Mr. Johnson's program promised Quebec will take over full jurisdiction over personal income, corporate profit and inheritance taxes, all of which now are shared with the federal government.

Since the election, he has said he is prepared to negotiate over these matters.

Mr. Johnson has indicated he will take a definite stand on some matters, such as a medicare program.

WILL PAY HALF

The federal government has offered to pay half the cost of any provincial medicare scheme set up by July 1, 1967.

Mr. Johnson, who doubts that the province can afford such a plan at the moment, is advocating a go-slow policy.

The test will come at the forthcoming autumn federal-provincial conference, when new tax-sharing arrangements to replace those which expire next spring will be negotiated.

One Ottawa informant said the federal government might be in for an easier time, even though Mr. Johnson's demands might be greater than those of Mr. Lesage.

Main reasons for this are: Mr. Johnson's reputation as a man ready to make "deals"; the slim majority he now holds in Quebec; and the fact that Mr. Pearson may find it easier to say no to a non-liberal premier.

LESS CONCILIATORY?

Officials say that because the federal and provincial governments were previously Liberal, Mr. Pearson may have been more conciliatory than he will be toward a Union Nationale premier.

However, some Quebec Liberals believe that a curt refusal of Quebec demands could be the kiss of death for their party, as Mr. Johnson would return and call another election, asking for a stronger mandate from the people.

They believe he might get it too, because of the wound which would have been dealt to Quebec nationalism.

Because of this, it is believed in Quebec that if Mr. Johnson pushes his demands to the limit at the federal-provincial talks, the federal government, with the threat of separatism in the background, may meet him at least half way.

If this were to come about, Quebec would once again be an exclamation point rather than a question mark.

$29,000 Allotted For Access Roads

Grants totalling $29,000 as 50 per cent of the cost of building and maintaining mine access roads were approved by the B.C. Cabinet Tuesday.

Largest grant, $25,000, will pay half the cost of opening a new road in the northernmost Liard mining division from Scud River to Galore Creek, to serve the Galore Creek mine development.

Junk Commands High Prices When Sold as U.K. Antiques

LONDON (Reuters) — Prices paid at sales of pictures and antiques in London have taken a leap startling even to veteran dealers.

From the sale rooms of London's West End specializing in old master, fine silver, jade and porcelain to the colorful stall in the famous Portobello Road Market, selling what the uninitiated might regard as junk, business is booming for the city's 2,500 dealers.

Early in March, experts estimated that a painting, the size of a big postcard, of St. George slaying the dragon, attributed to the Flemish painter Hubert Van Eyck, could fetch as much as £100,000, $300,000.

In fact, it was sold for £220,000 ($660,000)—or more than £10,000 ($30,000) a square inch.

Last December, 32 impressionist paintings bought in the 1930s by a Caracas businessman on trips to Paris for a total of about £4,000 ($12,000) were auctioned in London for £136,000 ($408,000).

Even within the last 12 months, some items have doubled in price. In 1964, Sotheby's auctioned a transfer printed mug for £70 ($210). Last year, it resold in the same sale room for £120 ($360).

Small Chelsea scent bottles, which were selling at about £500 ($1,500) in 1960, climbed steadily in the last five years but now have levelled off at around £900 ($2,700).

The theory in the trade is that, since they were small and could be slipped in a pocket, American tourists were buying them up to get them past the customs on their return, and selling them at home.

One Portobello Road dealer, who bought a crate full of old earthenware ginger beer bottles, made around 1900 for a penny each, sells several every Sunday morning at 10 shillings ($1.50) each without difficulty.

Another dealer, who brought three chipped water jugs for a total of £5 ($15) sold them the next day for £5 each.

To find their raw material, dealers tour the country tirelessly, returning to London from country houses with truck loads of dented armor, rusted muskets, and cracked china, all of which they can be sure of selling.

As yet, there is no sign of the bubble bursting and the demand still far outstrips the supply.

SFU Residences Given Go-Ahead

A $1,120,000 construction program of student residences on the Simon Fraser University campus was given a green light by the provincial government Tuesday.

It gave the university board permission to borrow more than $1 million from Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation for the project.

Man Collapses During False Pretences Trial

Magistrate Ostler asked him first if he wanted the trial delayed and later if he wanted to see a doctor. McGarvey gulped a pill and insisted the case continue.

"I'd like to get this over with," he said.

He admitted having a heart condition and a few moments later asked that the trial be stopped so he could see his doctor.

After the courtroom emptied, he lay on one of the spectators' benches until treated by a doctor who was in the adjacent police building.

Magistrate Ostler scheduled his trial to continue today and ordered the accused man's employer to return as the key defence witness, bringing complete records of McGarvey's financial dealings for the past 11 months.

The accused has been employed as a salesman by Jack Warnock, owner of Ideal Insulation and Roofing Co. Ltd., 2028 Douglas, since last July.

Witnesses earlier in the day testified to a series of six worthless cheques McGarvey wrote for groceries and gasoline.

NO ACCOUNT

Bank officials testified that he did not have an account at the branch the cheques were drawn on but at another branch. Only two deposits were made to the account and its balance reached a maximum of $23 in the seven weeks it was open last fall.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told the court at the start of the trial he intended proceeding initially on the six charges of false pretences laid by city police. There are also eight similar charges from the Colwood office of the RCMP and one from Oak Bay police.

MADE GOOD

Several witnesses said McGarvey had made good the bad cheques he gave them, in most cases months after.

Conducting his own defence, the accused called his employer confirm a banking arrangement as a witness and asked him to where McGarvey would have $50 a week credited to his account until such time as he "made a good deal." The commissions then earned would be used to cover the advances.

MISUNDERSTANDING

Mr. Warnock did not agree there had been such an arrangement but suggested there may have been a misunderstanding. He advised all his salesmen to open accounts so that money owed them could be deposited to their credit when they were not in town.

"I've either made a fool of myself or got myself in a pile of trouble," McGarvey said during debate on the banking arrangements.

When Mr. Warnock was vague on how much money his company had paid the accused and in what way, Magistrate Ostler ordered the witness to return today with records of what McGarvey had been paid during his employ, and how he had received the money.

'End Barriers To U.S. Trade'

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Liberal member of the British Columbia legislature Tuesday night called for complete reciprocity with the United States and any other nation willing to negotiate free trade.

Patrick McGeer of Vancouver Point Grey said the time has come to "cut the ball and chain" of economic nationalism and to pursue aggressively complete reciprocity.

McGEER

GORDON CRITICISED

Dr. McGeer, in a speech to the Vancouver Real Estate Board, echoed recent western Liberal criticism of the "protectionism" preached by Walter Gordon, former Liberal finance minister.

"Let us not just brush aside Gordonism," he said. "Let us call now for complete reciprocity with the U.S. and any other nations willing to negotiate free trade.

"Let us put an end to meaningless phrases such as 'freer trade' or 'gradual reduction of tariffs' which protectionists only use as camouflage.

"Let us say that we want the ball and chain of protectionism cut now and we are for efficient and competitive industry."

He said the western provinces are used to competing on world markets and have proved Canadians can compete successfully and do not have to hide behind tariff barriers.

But many manufactured goods needed in the West must be purchased from sheltered industries in Quebec and Ontario where competing on a world scale is not contemplated.

Retirement at 60 Ordered For Government Firemen

The provincial government has begun a policy of retiring its fire fighters at the age of 60 instead of 65 "due to the strenuous nature of their work."

The government employs about a dozen firefighters at Riverview Mental Hospital and Tranquille School for Handicapped Children.

"I would hate to think of a 65-year-old man having to climb a ladder to rescue panicked mental patients during a fire," one government official commented.

Immediately affected by the cabinet order introducing the policy were two 63-year-old employees and one who is approaching 61.

ALIENATION SICKENS

The World Health Organization says that the isolation of individuals in a seemingly hostile environment produces mental disturbance, and that this underlies many of the effects of urbanization.

NEW PADRE for Old Contemptibles was named with presentation of padre's badge to Canon George Biddle (centre) by Lieut.-Col. W. S. Dingley (left) and Capt. Harold Russell. Canon Biddle, who served with Canadian Army in First World War, joins group of former British Army soldiers who fought at outbreak of war. Victoria branch of Old Contemptibles formed about two years ago, boasted about 30 old soldiers, but no padre. Lieut.-Col. Dingley was in 1st Battalion of Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, and Capt. Russell is veteran of Queen's Westminster Rifles.

Bible Upheld As Literature

SEATTLE (AP)—Two fundamentalist ministers lost their suit Tuesday to force the University of Washington, on constitutional grounds, to abandon a course on the Bible as literature.

Superior Court Judge W. R. Cole rejected the plaintiffs' contention the course constituted religious instruction and violated federal and state constitutional provisions against use of public funds for such purposes.

NOT MANDATORY

The judge said his decision was based principally on the fact that students are not required to take the course, and, unlike public schools, are not even required to attend the university.

"I believe the Bible as literature is a proper subject of the humanistic field," he added.

PRINCE NAMES COAT

The suit was bought by the Rev. Thomas Miller of the Calvary Bible Presbyterian Church, Seattle, and the Rev. Harold Webb of the Tacoma Bible Presbyterian Church.

During the seven-day trial, Bible scholars from the East and California, professors, students, university officials and church leaders were called to testify.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1966--PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

A day or two ago, you may recall, an appeal to milk consumers appeared in the advertising columns. It urged customers to put their milk-buying on a cash or token basis so that the man on the route wouldn't have to burden himself with account - keeping. This message was signed chummily, "Your milk salesman".

Since the ad appeared, my ear has been donged by several irate milkmen, whose collective sentiments would curdle cream.

"We didn't have a thing to do with that appeal," runs a typical reaction. "The dairies put it in, and I wish they hadn't. Believe me, it's costing us money."

What's happening, he and other pilots of the snub-nosed milk-truck insist, is that too many of their customers are taking the cash - on - the - line preachment too literally.

It used to be, they point out, that the housewife who had used up her tokens and also her cash would settle the impasse with a casual, 'Leave two (or four, or six depending on the age and number of her brood) and I'll pay you day after tomorrow.'

Now, the plaint goes, she mixes up some milk powder or thins a can of condensed, and when her husband comes home, scoots him off to the store for fresh cow in a carton.

"We're offering a service," the salesmen protest, "and we don't object to letting a customer run on credit for a couple of days."

The old red-brick B.C. Protestant Orphanage at Cook and Hillside has the air of a beseiged castle these days, and except for spunky Edward Williams, its directors seem to have been paralyzed by current attacks on an institution which has creaked along usefully for 73 years.

The burden of the criticism showered by child welfare agencies is that the Orphanage methods and plant are outmoded, and that those who operate the private establishment should yield to approved modern practice in caring for the derelict if non-orphaned children brought to it.

Like most disputes, this one has two sides, and the youngster who has been bounced in and out of several foster homes with scarifying effect might well be grateful for the sanctuary an old-fashioned orphanage offers.

It is also to be expected that agencies whose resources fall to match their needs should look longingly at an institution which they see as endowed beyond its requirements.

In any case, since charges have been made they should be answered, not in a scattergun war of conflicting claims, but through a government-sponsored inquiry.

Short takes:

The Red Lion Inns, Industrial League softball team who used to be the Orphans, played their first sponsored game in their new sweaters at Macdonald Park Monday evening. Colors, red with white.

"We had the sweaters," says player Jim Bowes, "and the caps and socks, but the new pants haven't arrived yet, so we wore our old ones. Kind of a half-uniform, I guess you'd say."

Half-rigged or not, the R.L.I.s celebrated the occasion with a 4-3 win.

"They're supposed to stay within limits," he grouches, "but they never do. Why can't they leave the little lakes to the canoes and rowboats? Why don't they go beat up Shawnigan or the salt chuck?"

Why indeed; and how long until the antics of a few force upon boatmen the licensing system which they've so far managed to avoid?

And to a certain treasury department computer at Ottawa: if you insist that $62.04 is mine, so be it. Darn if I'm about to argue with a mechanical brain!

VICTORIA HAS THE ATTRACTIONS

FACILITIES SADLY LACKING

Conventions: Industry Without Smokestacks

By DESMOND BILL

That report, prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board, shows that industries in Victoria are either static or declining, with one exception—the tourist business.

The future of the city depends on tourists.

Yet one simple development that would give tourism its biggest possible boost has been overlooked until now.

This morning, in a small room at City Hall, tourist promoters were meeting with civic officials to try and bring about that development—the establishment here of a convention centre.

The situation is easily stated: Victoria has more potential for attracting conventions than any city in the Pacific Northwest, but it also has the least convention facilities.

The result is Victoria annually misses convention business that would inject enough money into the economy to fuel a local boom.

Harrison Hot Springs Hotel can handle twice as large a convention as can be jammed into the Empress.

"Victoria isn't even in the convention business," says Nick North, manager of the Imperial Inn and president of the Visitors' Bureau.

No one in the tourist business would dispute that except Les Parkinson, manager of the Empress. His hotel drums up more conventions for the city than any other. There are 64 major meetings booked at the Empress for the rest of the season and convention promoters are working as far ahead as 1972.

But if the Empress is the most active convention hotel it also illustrates the limitations of what Victoria can offer. The biggest convention the Empress can handle is 500 persons, and that only by straining the hotel to its limits.

Hosting a convention is not just a matter of providing space where conventioneers can assemble under one roof. Usually more than one meeting is going on at a time during a convention and often display rooms are required and places where committees can meet. The recent United Commercial Travellers' convention at the Empress is an illustration: it had only 140 delegates but it was enough to plug the hotel.

The Empress has other disadvantages. The main meeting place is in the ballroom which also serves as a banquet room. Conventions have to

More Widening Slated for Fall

Five-Mile Project On Pat Bay Route

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi today said his department is busy drawing up specifications for widening five more miles of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes.

"But we have to take it to treasury board for a decision before we can call for tenders," he said.

"There's every chance we will have to do the work itself in the fall because of tourism although there may be some things we can do before then without causing too much disruption."

The new widening project would be the second in a series that is expected to cost a total of about $2 million for most of the 23-mile highway joining Victoria to the Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

Mr. Gaglardi said the current plans do not include overpasses or underpasses at three Sidney area crossroads as requested last year by the municipal council at an estimated cost of $500,000.

NO DECISION

"We're not going to give them everything they're asking for but we're certainly still considering it," he said. "There has been no definite decision made yet."

Although the overpasses will not be included in the next contract, Mr. Gaglardi said they could be added at a later date if a favorable decision is made.

Work is nearing completion on the 2.1-mile widening project begun last fall with paving now underway between the ferry terminal and the northern outskirts of Sidney.

$300 BAIL IN KICKING ACCUSATION

Bail was set at $300 for Donald Logue, 3471 Seymour.

Theoffence is alleged to have occurred Sunday on the Patricia Bay Highway near Royal Oak Burial Park.

'Heinous Conduct'

Three-Month Term Follows Driving Spree

A man who chose the street in front of city police station to go on a car-wrecking spree Tuesday night was sentenced this morning to three months in jail.

James Lemon, HMCS MacKenzie, pleading guilty to charges of criminal negligence, failing to remain at the scene of an accident and driving while disqualified, received one month on each charge.

His licence will be suspended for two years.

HIT COUNCILLOR'S CAR

Lemon's car then turned right to go west on Fisgard St. near the police station, striking a car operated by Oak Bay councillor Mrs. Frances Elford, 3045 Lardowne.

The car then crossed to the wrong lane of Fisgard colliding with a parked car owned by Salvation Army Brigadier J. Thiertein, 850 Cook.

Court was told that Lemon then drove west on Fisgard at speeds estimated at 55 and 60 m.p.h. turning on to Store, abandoning the car in a lot and throwing its keys into some bushes.

$1,600 DAMAGE

Aggregate damages to all cars involved were estimated by police at $1,600.

Sentencing Lemon, Magistrate William Ostler said "there is only one thing to do with such heinous and wicked conduct as this."

Three Drivers Lose Licences For Impairment

Norman Gilchrist, 2517 Graham, charged with driving while impaired Tuesday about 9:50 p.m. was fined $350 and his licence was suspended.

Court was told Gilchrist caused a chain collision at Cook and Pandora by colliding with the rear of a car stopped for a red light causing that car to strike the car in front of it.

Total damage to the three cars was estimated by police at $575.

Jury Trial Chosen On Break-in-Charge

One of two men charged with a break-in at Ensign Motors June 8 elected to be tried before a judge and jury when he appeared in central court this morning.

Vern Umphrey, 620 Huxley, was remanded to June 23 to fix a date for a preliminary hearing.

He has been released on $5,000 bail.

Accidental Death Ruled in Drowning

Gerald Chipps of the Becher Indian Reserve died accidentally Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Monday night.

Hardly a Slip On Barefoot Ship

By TERRY IZZARD

"They can feel the rope beneath their feet much better when they're without shoes," said the 44-year-old veteran skipper.

●

The rope, used to operate the ship's 25,242 square feet of sail, has to be renewed every two years.

ORPHANAGE MULLS OVER CRITICISM

That was the word this morning from Frank Shandley, president, on Tuesday night's meeting of the Orphanage directors.

Mr. Shandley said the directors are not prepared to make any statement at this time in reply to criticisms that the Orphanage is not realizing its potential in helping needy children in the community.

Merchant Guild Awaits Ruling By Government

The union representing licensed personnel aboard B.C. Ferries is waiting for a government ruling on its application for representation rights.

The Canadian Merchant Service Guild signed up 200 masters, mates and engineers in March, representing 80 per cent of the officer personnel.

A Guild spokesman said he is confident there will be a ruling but declined to speculate on what it might be.

If the cabinet recognizes the group, it would have representation rights but not collective bargaining as spelled out in the Labour Relations Act, which doesn't apply to government workers.

Careless Drivers

Fined this morning in traffic court for charges of careless driving were:

Kenneth Campbell, 501 Obed, $75 and two months suspension; Herman Wood, 562 Dupplin, $40; Margaret Leheim, 2364 Millstream, $40; Henry White, 2127 Vancouver, $40; Thomas Dwight, 245 Lascelles, $40; Albert Findlay, 486 Tolmie, $35; Ralph Stevens, 2531 Government, $35.

SUBSIDIZED SAANICH PLAN FOR ALL AGES

Housing Plan to Council Soon

Subsidized housing for low-income groups in Saanich will come before a council committee meeting next week or early next month.

Coun. Edith Gunning, chairman of the health and welfare committee, said further information will be presented on a possible project by the municipality.

Senior officials were instructed three months ago to report on subsidized accommodation.

Reports by welfare administrator Frank Heaton, assessor Jack Lindsay and planner Tom Loney were presented to the committee April 19.

The committee agreed the subject required careful consideration and it was tabled so that more information could be gathered.

Coun. Gunning said she is concerned at the delay, but wanted to have complete information so a good presentation could be made with a good chance of success.

What is envisaged is a 65-suite three-storey apartment building for low-income people of all ages.

Approved schemes financed under the National Housing Act have 75 per cent of land acquisition and construction costs borne by the federal government and 25 per cent by the province.

Any operational deficit is met 75 per cent by the federal government, 12½ per cent by the province and 12½ per cent by the municipality.

Saanich took the first steps towards such a scheme after hearing of some residents living in semi-slum conditions in old buildings that should be torn down.

A survey by social welfare officials of 45 families receiving assistance showed 28 of them are paying more than 50 per cent of their income in rents and utilities.

Fourteen families are paying between 40 and 50 per cent and three are spending between 30 and 40 per cent.

This compared with the recognized average of 20 per cent of income, said Coun. Gunning.

$75-$225 MONTHLY

The social assistance income of these families ranges from $75 a month to $225 depending on the number of dependents.

She hoped the additional information will be ready in time for next Tuesday's health and welfare committee meeting. If it isn't, it will come up early next month.

The forthcoming marriage has been announced of Barbara Browning Walton, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter E. Walton of Santa Barbara, Calif., to Mr. Robert Howard Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Taylor, 3557 Kelsey Place. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 25 at 2 p.m. in the Church of St. George the Martyr. Dr. N. S. Noel will officiate. The bride-elect is a 1966 graduate of the Royal Jubilee Hospital school of nursing and her fiance is a recent graduate of the University of Victoria. (Miss Walton's photo by Chevrons Studio; Mr. Taylor's by Simpson Studio).

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Ward, 2520 Asquith Street, have announced the forthcoming marriage of their only daughter, Lillian Penelope, to Mr. Robert John Scott, son of Mrs. Margaret Scott, 1215 North Park Street. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 25 at 7 p.m. in St. Mark's Anglican Church. Canon Robert Willis will officiate. (Canadian Studios).

Only Jewelry Accent to Taffeta Gown

GIFT OF PEARL PENDANT

A single drop pearl set in diamonds, the groom's gift, was the only jewelry accent worn by Donna May Campbell when she became the bride of Joseph Norman Lumb recently. Her floor-length gown of white taffeta was styled along empire lines and featured a panel of lace appliques down the front. The same lace appliques starred the train. Her chapel-length veil misted from a tiara of seed pearls and crystals.

Rev. A. Beaton heard vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Campbell, 1508 Holly Street, and the son of Mrs. M. Lumb, Vancouver, and the late Norman Lumb. Mr. Campbell gave his daughter in marriage.

Mrs. Lorna Wells, matron of honor for her sister, wore a gown of raspberry pink peau de soie and a matching wedding ring headpiece.

Bridesmaids were the Misses Beth and Lynn Campbell, the bride's other sisters. Their gowns of peau de soie were in shocking pink tones, and they wore matching headpieces. They carried bouquets of white carnations.

Little Laurie Wells was flower girl for her aunt. Her frock was of white nylon over satin, and she carried a basket of white carnations and shocking pink ribbon. All wore crystal drop necklaces, gifts of the bride.

Tom Armstrong was best man and guests were ushered to pews by Jim Montgomery and Douglas Lumb.

Hector Campbell proposed the toast to his niece at the reception in Holyrood House, where the bride and groom cut a three-tier cake. It was made by the bride's mother and decorated with pink and white flowers by Mrs. Dorothy Brandon. The cake was flanked with candles and rosebuds.

For travelling on honeymoon to the Interior, the new Mrs. Lumb wore a navy blue and white suit of silk crepe with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Clubwomen's News

Donations— The sum of $100 has been presented to both the Korean project and municipal bursary funds by the Maj. John Hebden Gillespie Chapter IODE. This was announced at the chapter's recent meeting in the Uplands Road home of Mrs. K. Dorman. Other donations were: Commonwealth relations, $50; democratic action, $10; shipping fund, $50; overseas relief, $50; Canadian Scene, $15; endowment fund, $25; second war memorial, $25; scholarship fund, $10, and educational assistance, $25. Services convener Mrs. F. Adams reported that 20 health kits had been made and sent to Eskimos in the Northwest Territories. It was announced that arrangements were being made to send three children to camp this summer.

Grass 'Brush' Paid Dividends

VANCOUVER (CP) — One day in her native Holland, Ineke Leupen found she was a long way from home with a sketch pad but no pen or pencil. So she made a brush out of pieces of grass. She liked the effect and stuck with the "brush." She recently opened an exhibition of her work here.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Those Clothes Make the Man Mad

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This nut I am engaged to says if I want to be married in a formal wedding gown, it's O.K. with him, but HE is not going to get all dressed up in a "monkey suit."

When we went to the wedding rental place, the man showed Sandor what he was supposed to wear for a formal wedding, and Sandor said "Over my dead body!"

He would only have to wear it once, Abby, and it could be made to fit him comfortably, but Sandor says he is going to wear his new dark blue suit with a regular shirt and tie. And when Sandor says something, that is final! How do you reason with a man like that?

IN TEARS

DEAR IN: Your fiance is an individualist. Wear what you wish, and let Sandor do the same. It will appear odd, but the ties will be no less binding.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and no raving beauty, but I am not ugly either. I was over at my girl friend's house one night and when she called up "C"—a boy I like—and she asked him what he thought of me. He didn't come right out and say he LIKED me, but he didn't say he HATED me, either.

I was listening in on the other phone. I was going to ask him to our club formal, but now I'm not sure. He has never asked me out, but whenever we were accidentally thrown together, he acted like he sort of liked me. I am all confused. Please tell me what to do.

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Forget "C" and ask a boy who has asked you out. And if you want to be well liked by both boys and girls, don't be a party to calling up boys. And NEVER listen in on the other phone. It's dishonest and childish.

DEAR ABBY: What can be done for a 77-year-old woman with a drinking problem? That woman is my mother, and it breaks my heart to see her destroying herself. It all began several years ago when dad retired and they started spending their winters in Florida. Why would a loving, respected grandmother turn to alcohol after having done practically no drinking previously?

Dad is strictly a one-drink-before-dinner man. I finally got the courage to speak to mother about it, and she said she could quit anytime, but I know she can't. She drinks alone and thinks no one knows it. I can't force my mother to go to a doctor, and I can't accuse my father of lying when he says she is "better." I am an RN and know where she's heading. How can I help her, Abby?

HEARTBROKEN DAUGHTER

HEARTBROKEN DAUGHTER: No one can overcome alcoholism unless he admits that he is powerless against drink. That is the first step in the Alcoholics Anonymous method. Your mother could possibly be helped by joining that group. It's worth a try.

If she were to see a psychiatrist and he unearthed the reason your mother was trying to destroy herself, he might be able to rescue her. But it is a sad fact of life that no one can be helped who will not help himself.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NOT WITHOUT SIN:" Who is? Just train your child in the way you know you should have gone yourself. Providence will do the rest.

Up-Island Meet

A number of Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club members travelled to Manana Lodge, Ladysmith, recently, to attend a joint installation and dinner meeting of the Nanaimo and Duncan BPW clubs. Miss Ella Brett, Victoria, conducted the installation. Also attending the meet were club president, Miss Elizabeth Clement; Mrs. E. Forsythe, Mrs. Irmgard MacMaster, Mrs. E. Evans, Mrs. Kae Fleming, Mrs. R. Hamill, Mrs. Carrie McLean, the Misses Margaret Clay and Marjorie Gibson.

Blondes Get More Fun Out of This Machine

By Penny Saver

Thank Heavens we live in a machine age! This week, I've never been more grateful that I let out my first infant yell long after "the good old days" had been put under wraps.

The reason for my renewed rejoicing is a dandy little machine that made its debut in a downtown department store a few weeks ago. It's the "social lion" of the store's hairdressing salon. It not only saves the customer money, it also saves something just as important . . . if not more . . . those carefully hoarded hours of leisure!

If you, like me, like to give Mother Nature an "assist" by adding a little extra color to your tresses, you'll want to shake the hand of the firm that designed this mechanical genius. The same firm that pioneered machine permanents, they've equalled their original break-through with this dandy creation.

I had that "I'm from Missouri" attitude when I was invited to try it out for myself. I was told that, by using it, the time needed for a tint, bleach or tone would be cut to one-tenth of that needed by the old system.

But, so help me, it works! Instead of sitting with a messy top-knot for 40 minutes while my sun-faded hair received its monthly "jolt in the arm," I found myself giving the machine a grateful thank-you pat just four minutes after we became acquainted. The secret, apparently, lies in filtered rays that duplicate wave lengths of the sun and create a constant atmosphere in which the color can develop evenly.

Like many a gal before me, I've often toyed with the idea of experimenting and finding out whether blondes do really have more fun. But those long, long hours needed to make the transformation had always cooled my ardor. Who wants to spend six hours with an itchy scalp while your old color is bleached out and replaced with a shade more suitable to your taste? With this friendly machine, this time is cut to less than an hour . . . you can almost go Kim Novak's color on your lunch hour, providing you have an understanding boss!

What's more, there's less risk of a sore scalp because the color is on for a much shorter period and your bank account receives a boost, too, because of the same reason. Where, by the old method, a second application was needed, this can often be avoided because the saving of time keeps the hair more porous and the color penetrates better.

With approximately 80-per-cent of we women on the "color kick", I can see that this little machine will be busier than the computers in the vital statistics department.

What's more, newly-made blondes will have much more time to find out whether they top the fun poll!

Are you dying to have an introduction to my friend, the Magic Machine? If you are, give me a ring at 382-3131 and I'll give you his address.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

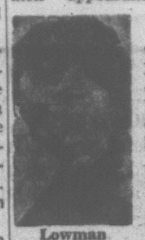
WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Improve Yourself One Way, Wonderful Things Happen

There are very few women, if any, who are not affected by their appearance. Most are greatly influenced by the way they look. Fortunately we don't have to be beautiful in order to be happy but we DO respond, in a dramatic way, to feeling that we are at our best.



Lowman

I am giving you a peep into my mail. This is an interesting letter.

"Dear Mrs. Lowman:

"I am a constant reader of your column and I and my friends agree that your advice concerning the struggle to avoid growing old is excellent. (Thanks.)

"In my profession of custom dress design I have seen the effects that a perfectly made suit or dress can have on my customers, most of whom are mature chronologically. They radiate an inner glow of satisfaction and preen themselves in the realization that they look good. Instantly their posture improves, their eyes light up and momentarily they are younger and brighter, if even in spirit.

"You can almost feel their desire to continue to enhance this aura of well being—a new coiffure to set off the garment, a new color lipstick, something new, which in reality is the basis of thinking young. When I think of the great feeling of accomplishment, which being a part of these changes in women, has brought me, I am glad that I selected the profession I did."

It is true that physical self-improvement or physical neglect can, and usually does, snowball. If a woman becomes careless in one way she is likely to slide in another. If she is so overweight that she is self-conscious about it she will probably take less interest in her clothes and hairdo and grooming. If she becomes really discouraged about her appearance and decides that it is hopeless, she gives up. This affects her posture and her personality. It is even possible that it will affect her interest in her health.

Self-improvement snowballs. If you have allowed youself to become trapped in the rut of neglect, begin with one determination and follow through. You will find that other determinations and interests will follow quickly. You just have to take that FIRST step. Nobody else can take it for you.

If you would like to have my leaflet "Essential Daily Routine" send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Benefit Ball

To raise funds to send a delegation of four children and an adult to a summer village at Hurdal, Norway, the Vancouver Island Chapter, Children's International Summer Villages will host a benefit ball, next Monday in the new Club Tango, 1037 View Street.

Entertainment will be by the John Capon Sextet from Vancouver and Victoria actor Harry Hill will act as master of ceremonies. Refreshments and raffles will be offered at the affair which begins at 9 p.m.

Proceeds will also be used to send high school students to an inter-teen conference in Ohio.

Of Personal Interest

AT PORT HARDY

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor will arrive at Port Hardy aboard HMCS Yukon on Friday. There, he will be joined by Mrs. George R. Pearkes, who will travel by air from Victoria to be present when His Honor opens the Fort Rupert Elementary School. On Saturday, His Honor and Mrs. Pearkes will cross to Alert Bay where His Honor will attend the Indian Day's celebration. He will open the new Long House and attend the ceremony where Hon. D. R. J. Campbell will turn over the riperian rights. After attending a salmon barbecue, His Honor and Mrs. Pearkes will fly back to Victoria that evening.

California Guest

Mr. R. D. Patterson travelled from his home in Chula Vista, Calif., to attend the wedding, Saturday afternoon, of Miss Sherry Clay and Mr. Gary Easton. Other out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Clay, Miss Muriel Clay, Mr. M. Barter, Mr. and Mrs. H. Williamson and Mr. A. Campbell, all of Vancouver; Mrs. A. P. Dawe, Kelowna; Dr. and Mrs. G. Reynolds of Port Alberni; Dr. and Mrs. R. Lindsay and Dr. and Mrs. W. Lindsay of Nanaimo; Dr. and Mrs. E. T. Cornhill of Shawnigan Lake; Mrs. G. Noble, Ucluelet; Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Neill and Mrs. L. Haas of Saratoga Beach, B.C.

Marry in East

The forthcoming marriage is announced of Judith Valentine Hinton Louis, daughter of Mrs. Evelyn Watton Louis, Toronto, and Mr. Reginald Cecil Louis, Victoria, to Mr. Simon Granville Lyn Jones, Toronto, son of Brigadier-General Leslie Llewellyn Jones and Mrs. Jones of Victoria. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 25 in the Church of St. Clement, Toronto.

Pink and Green

The gifts were in a clothes basket that was decorated in pink and green and trimmed with clothes-pins in the same tones when bride-elect Miss Audrey Langhorst was honored at a shower in the Clive Drive home of Miss Frances Porter. Mrs. S. Foubister was co-hostess. The affair was given by the staff of Carne Rebekah Lodge No. 45, of which the honor guest is a member of the initiation team.

Here From Boston

Miss Claire Blackley travelled from her Boston, Mass., home to attend the recent wedding of Miss Georgina McGee and Mr. Francis Blackley. Also from out-of-town were Mrs. H. Blaines and Alda of Calgary; Miss Brenda Cropp of Seattle, Wash., and the Misses Angela Caddell and Nancy Main of Vancouver.

Women

Women's Editor — Pat Dufour

Dishes to tickle everyone's taste-buds will be offered, this Saturday at the smorgasbord dinner of St. Andrew's Cathedral Council, Catholic Women's League. The annual affair begins at 4:30 p.m. in St. Louis College, Pandora Avenue, and the proceeds are earmarked for the group's various charities. Discussing some of the final arrangements for the popular event are left to right, conveners Mrs. C. Edwards, Mrs. F. Lessard and Mrs. E. Desilet. Also helping to convene the affair is Mrs. D. Rivers.

WED IN QUEEN OF PEACE CHURCH

Couple Honeymoons at Niagara Falls

Following their recent marriage in Queen of Peace Church, Esquimalt, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rafferty Blackley left for a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, Ont., and New York.

The bride, the former Georgina Lois McGee, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey McGee, 836 Dunsmuir Street. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Blackley of Crystal Beach, Ont.

Baskets of white gladioli, chrysanthemums and lilacs, accented with blue iris, decorated the church for the service at which Fr. M. S. McNamara officiated. Mr. McGee gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's floor-length gown was of silk crepe, styled on empire lines. The bodice was of fine lace and featured a hand-clipped lace-trimmed neckline, starred with diamentes, and lily-point sleeves. Similar lace formed the full cathedral train. Her re-embroidered veil of silk illusion net misted from a trio of peau de soie roses and only jewelry was a sapphire and pearl pendant, the gift of the bride's father to her mother at their wedding. She carried a white prayer book, topped with white rosebuds, and a blue crystal rosary, which was sent from England by her aunt, Mrs. E. Brown.

Floor-length gowns of blue crystal, styled on empire lines, were worn by matron of honor, Mrs. C. Lang, and bridesmaids, the Misses Claire Blackley and Angela Caddell. Their headpieces were matching bows trimmed with net and they carried blue and white carnations topping white prayer books.

Little flower girls, Alda Blaines and Wendy White were in frocks of white taffeta, circled at the waist with sashes of blue crystal. Headpieces were peau de soie bows of blue. They carried white baskets of white and blue carnations.

Best man was James Lang. Ushering guests were John McGee and Ray Bergen. The bride's brother, Robert, was altar boy.

M. Kokran proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in the Dominion Hotel Terra Cotta Room. The head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake and decorated with white streamers and wedding bells. Lily of the valley and bells topped the cake.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Blackley chose an Italian import two-piece dressmaker suit in deep turquoise with hat en tone. She complemented the outfit with a corsage of pink rapture roses.

VON's Board Hears Appeal Made For Support of Community Chest

An appeal for support of the "Fair Share" campaign of the Victoria Community Chest was made by president Mrs. T. H. Johns when she spoke to the board of directors of the Victorian Order of Nurses at the recent meeting in Spencerhouse.

Mrs. Johns noted that much of the VON budget is supplied by the Community Chest. "Fair Share" supporter cards were distributed by W. Patton of the United Appeal campaign.

VON board president J. B. Barnum announced that four team captains had been named to organize the board's role in canvassing for this year's campaign.

Miss Betty Short gave the director's report for Miss Elizabeth Riddell. It was noted that 210 patients had been admitted and 2,095 calls had been made during the month, with 18 night calls. Hospital referrals totalled 71 and five hours housekeeping service had been provided for one patient.

It was reported that 14 patients had been assessed by the consultant physiotherapist and that nine health counselling sessions had been given at the Silver Threads Service. Miss Short noted that the sessions would be discontinued during the summer months of July and August.

Four public health students from the University of British Columbia had worked with the nurses for two weeks, continued Miss Short. She reported an increase of almost 10-per-cent in bedside nursing in May over the same month in 1965.

During the month, the staff toured the new Goodwill Enterprises building, and classes for Red Cross Housekeepers were given by Miss E. Hutchinson. Two classes in instruction given to prenatals for students of the St. Joseph's Hospital school of nursing were conducted by Miss Short.

A report on the recent provincial annual meeting was given by Mr. Barnum. Guest speaker at the session, he said, was Dr. John McCreary, dean of medicine at the University of British Columbia, who stressed the importance of members of the medical and allied fields adapting themselves to the changing pattern of health care.

Snakes Became Her 'Babies'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mrs. Sarah Cunius, a charming blue-eyed grandmother, found operating a refreshment stand too seasonal, and she wanted steady work.

So 14 years ago, she took a job as a keeper in the reptile house at the Philadelphia Zoo.

"It's so interesting, there's always something to learn, and there's a challenge of accomplishing difficult things," Mrs. Cunius said.

SEW SIMPLE WITH Eunice Farmer

Dear Eunice Farmer:

You have given me so much confidence in my sewing that instead of being a nervous wreck when I work on a new garment, I am more relaxed. Consequently, I make so many less mistakes.

I am making a summer dress with a yoke in a contrasting color. The yoke is set into the bodice in a V, and although there is a centre front seam, I can't get the point of the yoke to fit in. It looks rounded and no matter how much I clip, it just won't come out right. Help!

Mrs. B. B. G.

Dear Mrs. B. B. G.:

You're so right about the importance of relaxing when sewing. I give my students the same lecture almost every week. A positive attitude can work wonders for you.

As to the yoke with the V to be set in, you must remember to stitch the centre front seam only to a mark ⅝ inch from the edge of fabric. You DO NOT machine stitch the entire seam closed. You must have this extra edge of fabric to work with. Be sure to back tack or secure the machine stitching where you have ended the seam.

First pin one side of the yoke so that the mark in the point of the yoke will match the point where you back stitched the seam. Stitch your seams up to this point and back stitch to secure. Remove from the machine and pin the other side of the yoke beginning at the point of the yoke and stitch to the end of the seam.

Remember you never cross over a seam when stitching; but remove the fabric and begin stitching again on the other side of your seam. This is one of the details that is described in detail in my leaflet "All About Gussets." You might not think about this in relation to a gusset, but the construction detail is very similar and if you can do the gusset detail perfectly, you will be able to construct many such details to perfection.

If you would like this informative leaflet, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope plus 10 cents to Eunice Farmer in care of this paper and your copy will be sent to you promptly.

TODAY'S RECIPE

SALMON-NOODLE CASSEROLE

Half (9 oz.) package noodles, 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons flour, 1¼ teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 (15½ oz.) can salmon, ¼ cup chopped celery, 2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, buttered bread crumbs.

Cook noodles in boiling salted water; drain. Melt butter, add flour, salt and pepper. Mix until smooth. Gradually add milk while stirring, and continue to cook until thick and smooth.

Five Island Players Are Off to Jamaica

For almost 10 years, Vancouver Island has been "left out in the cold" when it came to choosing players for the Canadian Women's Field Hockey Association touring team.

This year, the island is going to more than make up the deficit by walking away with five positions on the team this year which will be touring Jamaica — including that of manager.

Three local women, players Mrs. Geoffrey H. Hill and Mrs. John Trelawny, and manager Mrs. Michael Penn will leave with Mrs. Peter Clarke, Cobble Hill, and Miss Marguerite Bradford, Duncan, on July 14 to begin the two-week tour.

A former Victorian, Miss Gill Thomas, who now makes her home in Vancouver, will also be playing. Arriving in Montego Bay July 15, the team's itinerary includes a game there on July 17, and a program of entertainment, sight-seeing and sun-bathing. Next stop will be Kingston, with three or four more games scheduled and still more sight-seeing. Then it's back home on July 25.

Before leaving, though, the 11 players and two reserves, selected from teams across Canada, have begun an intensive self-training program, designed to improve co-ordination, leg muscles and wind.

The only worry manager Rosemary Penn confesses to is how the climate and the humidity of Jamaica will affect the players.

For Nancy Hill, the training will be all in a day's work — she's a physical education instructor at Victoria Senior Secondary School. Having played for the Cumberland County players in England, she has also competed for British Columbia against New Zealand.

Ruth Trelawny, touring as reserve defence, played for the Devonshire County players in her native England. She's now a housewife and mother of five.

Manager Rosemary Penn, mother of five, took most of her field hockey training right here in Victoria, at Norfolk House School. She played for the B.C. touring team during 1964 and is president of the provincial field hockey federation.

Mrs. Geoffrey H. Hill, left, and Mrs. John Trelawny, the two local women who have been selected to play on the Canadian Women's Field Hockey Association team touring Jamaica, have already begun a rigorous program to keep them in shape for the tour beginning July 14. They're looking forward to the trip, not only because of games they'll be playing, but also because their itinerary offers the attractions Jamaica is famous for — sight-seeing and sun-bathing.

MARTIN-HOLM

Grandmother Hears Recent Nuptial Vows

Mrs. J. Naswell travelled from her home in Erickson, Man., to attend the wedding of her granddaughter Sharon Starr Holm, and George William Martin, in Central Baptist Church.

Baskets of chrysanthemum, and snapdragons were at the altar of the church when Rev. R. D. Holmes heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Evert Holm, 1357 Davie Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Martin, 1437 Finlayson Street. Mr. Holm gave his daughter in marriage.

During the signing of the register, an accordian solo was played by Ron Mitchell. Organist Miss Phyllis Hick accompanied Mrs. I. Rendle who sang "The Wedding Prayer" during the ceremony.

The bride's full-skirted gown was of re-embroidered organza over taffeta, styled with a fitted bodice featuring a scalloped neckline. Her full tiered veil, trimmed with lace, misted from a rhinestone tiara and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and feathered white carnations. Only jewelry accent was the groom's gift of a black Alaska diamond pendant.

Matching gowns of yellow brocade were worn by maid of honor Miss Adele Ridland and bridesmaids, the Misses Linda Fawcett and Faye Abel. Their headpieces were rhinestone tiaras, the bride's gifts, and they carried bouquets of yellow and white chrysanthemums. Little Debby Naswell was flower girl for her cousin in a frock of yellow nylon, with yellow rose headpiece and basket of white and yellow carnations and chrysanthemums.

John Martin, Edmonton, was best man for his brother. Ushering the guests to pews marked with yellow roses were Brian Jenson, Danny Lees, and the bride's cousin, David Holm.

Miniature figures of a bride and groom in lace heart topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table for the reception following in the Tally-Ho Travelodge dining room. Cec Eno proposed the toast to the bride.

The couple will make their home at 1636 Hillside Avenue, following a honeymoon trip to Edmonton and Radium Hot Springs. For travelling, the bride chose a linen-weave suit in white wool, topped with a matching coat. White and red accessories and red rose corsage completed the outfit.

Worn for Easton-Clay Wedding Ceremony

VENETIAN LACE ENHANCES GOWN

Appliques of Venetian lace accented the floor-length gown of silk bengaline worn by Sherry Clay, Saturday evening, when she became the bride of Gary Wayne Easton in St. Aidan's United Church.

Venetian lace also trimmed the full train which swept back from her shoulders. Her chapel-length veil, bordered with similar lace and studded with rhinestones and pearls, misted softly from a self-fabric wedding-ring headpiece. She carried a crescent bouquet of Lauray roses and stephanotis.

Baskets of Majestic daisies and gladioli in white and hot pink tones decorated the church when Rev. A. G. MacLeod heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon R. Clay, 1630 Cedar Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Edward Easton, 1561 Oakcrest Drive. Dr. Clay gave his daughter in marriage.

During the service, organist Mrs. Vera Barclay accompanied Mrs. M. Dixon, who sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "I Love Thee."

Empire-line gowns of hot pink peau de soie were worn by maid of honor Miss Patricia Jackson and bridesmaids, the Misses Patricia Holmburg, Pamela Jones and Karen Easton. Their wedding-ring headpieces were of similar fabric, edged with veils, and they carried colonial bouquets of white carnations.

The little flower girls, Candice Clay and Lorna Davey, were in full-skirted frocks of hot pink peau de soie, trimmed with lace. Accenting the outfits were toning wedding ring headpieces and miniature colonial bouquets of white carnations and Lauray roses.

W. Neill was best man. Ushering the guests to pews that were marked with Esther Reed daisies and sweetheart roses were J. Lott, K. Leveridge and M. Easton.

Doves holding wedding rings topped the three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's aunt Mrs. W. Jackson, which centred the head table at the reception following in the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club. Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. W. W. Roe presided at the lace-covered tea table and acting as serviteurs were the Misses Kim Davey, Susan and Janie Fleming, Susan Heffernan, and Mrs. R. Lindsay. D. Clayton Bruce proposed the toast to the bride.

The couple will make their home in Wellington Manor, following a honeymoon trip to Banff and Harrison Hot Springs.

French lace appliques highlighted the white linen sheath dress worn by the new Mrs. Easton for travelling. The dress was topped with a coat of hand-knit brushed mohair and complemented with a matching pillbox hat and hot pink and white accessories. Lauray roses and stephanotis en corsage completed the outfit.

Off to Saskatoon

Miss Joan Groves will travel to Saskatoon next week to attend a convention of the Canadian Dietetic Association, being held there from June 20 to 24. Miss Groves is dietetic consultant with the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service.

'Medicare Means Slower Research'

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Premier E. C. Manning said Tuesday government operation of medical care insurance plans throws medical services into the political arena.

He told about 1,000 doctors at the annual convention of the Canadian Medical Association that all government programs are subject to political pressures.

For example, the premier said, a government might have to make a choice between expanding the range of services insured under its medical care scheme and expanding medical research.

Medical research would be almost sure to suffer, he said, because its benefits are long-range.

"When the rank and file of society have a choice between expansion of immediate care facilities and research programs, the program producing immediate results will take priority."

OUTLINE CMA AIMS

In addresses by other speakers, the convention was told the CMA wants:

—An independent group to study how the quality of medical care in Saskatchewan has been affected by that province's compulsory medical insurance plan;

—Doctors to be paid 100 per cent of their standard fees from all insurance plans, instead of 80 or 90 per cent of the fee as at present;

— More government assistance for people who have heavy drug bills because of chronic illness;

—More aid extended by Canada to develop medical manpower and facilities in new nations.

Mr. Manning said it is not the duty of the state to force medical insurance on all people. The state "must only make available assistance necessary to bring medical services within the reach of everyone."

Alberta's medical insurance scheme apparently would not qualify for federal aid under the proposed federal program because it is not operated by an agency responsible to the provincial government.

The federal government proposes to pay half the cost of an insurance scheme operated by an agency responsible to the provincial government.

In addition, a provincial scheme would have to be "universal" — providing insurance coverage to no less than 90 per cent of the population.

APPROVES PRIVATE PLANS

Under the Alberta plan, the government approves medical insurance packages offered by a variety of private and doctor-operated insurance agencies and sets maximum insurance fees.

The Alberta government provides financial aid for low-income people who want to purchase the medical insurance.

Earlier; Dr. Victor G. Goldbloom, chairman of the CMA's medical economics committee, suggested that the quality of medical care in Alberta be compared with that in Saskatchewan to determine the effect of a compulsory program.

The Saskatchewan scheme, introduced four years ago over harsh protests from doctors in the province, compels all citizens to purchase medical insurance. The plan also is helped financially from income and sales tax revenues. Welfare recipients' premiums are paid by the government.

Dr. Goldbloom said that when doctor-operated medical insurance plans began, doctors agreed to accept less than 100 per cent of scheduled fees to ensure the plans would remain solvent.

WANT SAME REDUCTIONS

B. E. Freamo of Toronto, CMA medical economics secretary, said governments wanted doctors to take the same reductions under government - sponsored plans. Doctors in Saskatchewan accepted 85 per cent of the scheduled fees as full payment.

He said because doctor-operated plans no longer need extra income to build up financial reserves, the 100 - per - cent reimbursement principle now should be applied both to the doctor-operated and government schemes.

Increased government assistance for chronically ill people who have heavy drug bills will be sought in a CMA brief to the parliamentary commitee on food and drugs June 28.

Dr. R. W. Gunton of Toronto, CMA pharmacy committee chairman, said the brief also will ask that:

1. The 11 - per - cent federal sales tax be removed from all prescription drugs.

2. Insurance against drug costs be included in medical insurance plans on a co-insurance basis, whereby people would pay a certain percentage out of their own pockets, thus preventing abuse of the system.

3. Pharmacists sell prescriptions on a fixed fee-for-service basis.

4. Canada maintain patent and tariff protection for Canadian drug manufacturers to enable them to invest in research and development.

Dr. D. G. Cameron of Montreal, CMA medical education committee chairman, said Canada "hasn't done a great deal" to help developing nations improve their medical facilities and training programs.

However, progress was expected from a new federal advisory committee on international health just approved by the federal cabinet. The committee would include representatives of the CMA, the Red Cross, the Canadian Association of Medical Colleges, various lay and church mission groups.

Dr. Cameron said the committee also would help set up more effective machinery for approving foreign doctors who come to work in Canada.

PORTUGAL ADJOURNS TRIAL OF WITNESSES

LISBON (Reuters) — Thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses milled around a courtroom Tuesday trying to catch a glimpse of 49 sect members charged with offences against Portugal's internal security.

The trial was adjourned until June 23.

The indictment says the 49 preached collective disobedience to the law on orders from their headquarters in New York. They worked as a political movement, it said, to promote disobedience and subvert men of military service age.

CHIEF SCOUT CHAMPIONS BARE KNEES

Those Shorts Are the Swingingest, Jazziest

By GLEN ALLEN

Jack Scrivener, Victoria region chief scout executive, pointed out today in answer to a senior scout official's criticism of scout shorts that the jazziest, the swingingest, the farthest "out" Bermudas, find their anestors in the traditional scout short pants.

"Scouts must take credit for the tremendous popularity of short pants whether they like it or not," said Mr. Scrivener.

"You see even the most corpulent males wearing Bermudas nowadays," he said, "and scouts in this case were the style-leaders."

Lofty Coning of Victoria, a regional representative on the B.C. and Yukon provincial council, had said, in approbation of a British committee report on scout costume, "Die-hards took good care that long pants were frowned on."

While Mr. Scrivener himself says he is not opposed to the wearing of longs, he claims the boys themselves prefer short pants.

"Both scouts and cubs," he said," decide on a patrol basis what they want to wear."

"They can certainly opt for longs if they want to."

"The way it works out in practice," he said, "is that longs are worn in winter, and shorts in summer months.

"It is really a matter of wearing the attire appropriate to the season."

Replying to Mr. Coning's charge that the scout round Mountie-type hat belongs to the bandolier and the "Lily Boys" days, Mr. Scrivener said "even if the hat was popular in Queen Victoria's day, it is no less popular now."

"Where the round hat has been discontinued, as in the United States, scouts themselves have demanded that it be brought back."

Mr. Scrivener agreed with Mr. Coning that the more fraternization between boy scouts and girl guides, the better it is.

"Of course we're all for it. But there are certain factors within the scout movement that limit fraternization."

Games, procedures and rituals are quite different one from the other, he said.

Mr. Scrivener said many of the recommendations made by the British committee had long been with the scout movement in Canada.

Vote Strike Action

EDMONTON (CP)—Employees of th Edmonton transit system Tuesday voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action.

The workers, members of Local 569 of the Amalgamated Transit Union, voted 472 in favor and 36 against a strike. No date was set.

Union officials were to meet today with city officials for bargaining talks on wages.

POET Allen Ginsberg, a patron saint of the "beat" generation, praised the effects of LSD and discounted its alleged dangers during testimony Tuesday before a U.S. Senate committee on juvenile delinquency. Ginsberg said he thought tens of thousands of persons are using the drug.

. . . CONVENTIONS

break early in order that tables can be set for lunch, and then have an intermission after lunch so that the staff can clear away dishes and get the place back in shape as a meeting room."

The Red Lion Motor Inn, the city's newest hotel, recently met the problem of catering to 450 convention delegates and their wives by taking over Crystal Garden for a night.

But these makeshift arrangements at the Empress and the Red Lion are not good enough to attract modern conventions against the competition offered by such places as Vancouver and Seattle. And anyway 500 persons is a small convention by modern standards.

In Vancouver, the Bayshore Inn can handle gatherings of up to 1,200 persons. Penticton's convention centre seats 1,700 persons for a meeting and 1,400 for a banquet.

INADEQUATE

Mr. Parkinson is frank enough to admit the Empress is inadequate for major meetings. He says, "No hotel, not even a C.P.R. one, can afford the sort of set-up that is needed nowadays for the big ones."

He estimates it would cost about $2,000,000 to build a convention centre in Victoria. Penticton's cost $700,000, Las Vegas put up one at a cost of $7,000,000 and Los Angeles is erecting one now for $20,000,000.

Mr. North says there has been no study on the cost of a convention centre here but he agrees with Mr. Parkinson's estimate for a centre to handle conventions of up to 3,000 persons. There is no sense in talking of anything smaller, he says.

BENEFITS

Hotelmen naturally think so. They would be the first to benefit directly because every conventioneer would have to stay in one of their rooms. But they have impressive statistics to back up their claim that the people of Victoria generally would also benefit from more convention business.

Mr. Parkinson says the Empress takes in about $3,000,000 a year and pays out $1,600,000 of that in wages. Other hotels spend a lower percentage of their take in wages but the lowest amount is 40 cents out of every tourist dollar.

That payroll is the mainstay of the city's economy and, as the Capital Region Planning Board report made clear, it will become increasingly important to the community as time goes on, and other businesses decline.

MORE WORK

Apart from the direct employment created and wages paid, hotels are among the biggest customers for such service industries as food, heating, maintenance, etc., thus indirectly creating more employment and consumer spending power.

Additionally, of course, there is the money that visitors spend on things other than accommodation. The government estimate is that a tourist spends $35 a day, including room rent. At that rate, a two-day convention of 1,500 persons would pump more than $100,000 into the local economy.

It seems they could. There are about 3,000 hotel rooms in the city and 300 of them are new in the last 14 months. Old established hotels such as the Douglas have also begun a program of renewal that is updating and modernizing available accommodation.

OFF SEASON

Most conventions are held in March, April, May, September and October, the periods when hotels are in their off-season. Very few occur during the tourist season, and one desirable feature of convention business is that it would provide a fillip to the economy at a time when few tourist come here.

There seems little doubt that Victoria would draw big conventions if it had the facilities.

The old-style conventioneer, out for a rip-roaring good time, usually wanted to head for the livelier cities where he thought the action was.

But the modern variety is more serious: more likely to bring his wife along with him. In fact, many of the biggest conventions are women's conventions.

And, as Mr. North says, "for some reason women are really sold on Victoria. It is amazing the number of them, especially from the U.S., who want to see this place.

"Most people in Victoria do not realize how Americans look on the city. It is the one place in British Columbia that everyone seems to have heard about. You'd be surprised, but I'm sure more Californians have heard of Victoria than of Vancouver."

RAISE ECONOMY

Ken Woodward, convention representative of the B.C. Government Travel Bureau, agrees the business could be had if the facilities were provided. He says, "If the city had a convention centre it would raise its whole economy."

It appears today's meeting at City Hall will result in a decision to hire a competent outsider to make a study of the city's convention potential.

Supposing, as expected, that the survey produces a favorable report, and that council agrees to spend the money, the question then would be: Where should the centre be located?

SITE OFFERED

The C.P.R. has offered a site "at reasonable cost" fronting on Belleville Street. Mr. Parkinson says this is the most desirable central location. Some uptown hotelmen would prefer the centre to be located beside Memorial Arena, closer to their own hotels.

But on one point they are all agreed. A convention centre would give Victoria the "industry without a smokestack" that it needs.

By DON DINGWALL

DUNCAN — The CPR is considering moving its rail yard out of Duncan.

And the main line may be moved to the east side of the right-of-way to make room for commercial development along Canada Avenue.

These possibilities are mentioned in the general development plan for the city drawn up by town planners Rawson and Wiles of Vancouver.

Mayor Jack Dobson said Tuesday the council has had "satisfactory" talks with officials of Marathon Realty, a subsidiary of CPR.

★

The plan was endorsed in principle by council Monday night.

Rawson and Wiles report states: "The most important techniques in implementing the plan are rezoning, re-plotting and renewal."

"The structure of the downtown must be changed in ways requiring public action of a rather drastic nature."

This includes removal of houses and other buildings for parking lots; removal of unrelated commercial and industrial uses for customer parking and the new civic centre.

The report states: "The downtown area needs a loop of major streets to connect routes leading to it.

"The removal of through traffic and provision of peripheral parking lots would reduce traffic density and enhance the environment.

"It has a poor environment on all counts," says the report, "and unrelated uses and poor structures should be removed.

"The excessive general business zone should be cut back by rezoning to residential. Areas near the downtown could then be rezoned for apartments."

The planners estimate the Duncan area population will grow from the present 18,500 to 26,000 by 1986.

The report says: "Duncan is likely to continue growing faster than other parts of the area and the city's problem will be to remain competitive as a place in which to live."

It forecasts the growth of "suburban" shopping centres in North Cowichan.

Rawson and Wiles say: "Improvements to the Cowichan Lake Road should receive top priority.

"But the possibility of better connection to the Gulf Islands should be investigated to enlarge Duncan's share of this area's expanding development. This might involve a new ferry crossing.

The planners deplore that heavy traffic not destined for the downtown area is going through it.

★

They condemn the narrowness and angle of the through route, Government Street, and state: "The net result is the increasingly inconvenient to get to, to move around in, and to park in."

The plan states: "What is needed now is a new kind of super intersection for the downtown to solve its traffic problems and help it regain good accessibility."

The plan would divert truck traffic from Lake Cowichan via a loop road (Cowichan Way) through Indian reserve.

Proposed connections or improvements include: Phillip Street to Cowichan Lake Road; Cairnsmore Street to Canada Avenue; Beverly Street to Canada Avenue; Lakes Road to Cowichan Way and Government Street to Coronation Avenue via Ingram Street and Queens Road.

The report advocates a third railroad crossing at Coronation.

Rawson and Wiles say: "There seems to be little willingness on the part of Duncan residents to develop the bouleyard in front of their property.

"This is done in other places where the road is as bad, or worse. Perhaps residents will develop the boulevard when paving curbing is installed."

They suggest conveying a strip of road allowance to abutting owners on condition they develop and maintain it.

But the planners add: "In the long run it may be easier for the city to develop boulevards out of general revenue or on a local improvement basis."

The planners see a need for elementary school annexes adjacent to Wharncliffe Park, and to Cowichan Senior Secondary School.

★

The first would eliminate the need for children to cross Trunk Road. The second would relieve overcrowding at Duncan Elementary and eliminate the need for car pools.

Without using the word the report hints the Jubilee Street areas is the nearest thing Duncan has to a slum.

It says part of Jubilee should be blocked to through traffic.

"Rehabilitation could be expected if an industrial shop, lumber yard and the worst houses were removed."

The planners say the Cowichan Co-op complex would be better located elsewhere, and the city works yard on Canada Avenue should be abandoned.

The report proposes both be housed in the Indian Reserve industrial estate.

The report names Duncan Iron Iron Works and Joe's Tire Hospital as the principal unrelated uses in the downtown area.

IMPAIRED DRIVER BLAMED

NANAIMO—A coroner's jury Tuesday ruled that Robert Richardson, 20, of Nanaimo, was impaired and drove a car in a reckless and dangerous manner causing his and a passenger's death June 10.

The accident occurred on the Island Highway, nine miles north of Nanaimo at Nanoose.

The jury was told Richardson's car drove on to the shoulder of the road and then swung into the opposite lane into the path of a West Coast Freight Ltd., semi-trailer truck.

WOMAN LOSES

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal Tuesday reversed a provincial Supreme Court ruling that awarded more than $50,000 to Mrs. Ethel Margaret English, 73, who now lives in Nanaimo, V.I.

The Appeal Court also ruled that Mrs. English is liable for court costs which could run as high as $12,000.

Mrs. English and her husband, Myles, last year sought the return of $50,000 in securities and $5,860 in cheques given her by Lester Everett Weaver for whom she had worked for nine years as housekeeper until shortly before his death at 87 in 1960.

Mrs. English testified before Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court that she returned the securities and cheques to the Royal Trust Company on the request of a company official.

ARENA VOTE SATURDAY

NORTH COWICHAN—A total of 1,700 voters in the north end of North Cowichan municipality will go to the polls Saturday to decide on the fate of a planned $330,000 ice arena at Fullers Lake.

The same vote will also determine the formation of a special North Cowichan (Chemainus) recreational area.

Sportsmen Rebuild Skutz Falls Cable Span

DUNCAN — A 164-foot long cable bridge has been built across the Cowichan River at Skutz Falls.

'DO-IT-YOURSELF' KIT FOR SUSPICIOUS HUSBANDS

Romping Housewives Star for Bugs

By GEORGE LARDNER JR.
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — John W. Leon, a private detective with an eye for social change, has come up with a "do-it-yourself" kit for suspicious husbands.

Cuckoldry, he told an inquisitive Senate subcommittee Wednesday, seems to be on the rise, at least in the nation's capital.

Leon calls it "the ten-day blitz."

"If you don't come up with what you want after about 10 days of conscientious use," he explained, "you might as well forget it."

Equipped with wide angle and telephoto lenses, the home movie maker can be adjusted to take pictures every few seconds all day long.

"By the end of the day," Leon said, "you know everything that happened in the room" where it's hidden.

The rest of the package, he indicated, is designed to record sweet nothings whispered by the missus and her beau.

It includes gadgets for "bugging" the family car, voice transmitters for the house, a voice activator that can be used to trigger recording equipment, and a little telephone bug that can be installed by any amateur in less than five minutes.

The telephone bug, Leon said, is made by a Cuban refugee in Miami.

The whole kit, he said, costs only about $400 though a complete blitz with his services as a "consultant" could send the price as high as $1,500.

But Leon, who is appealing his 1964 conviction in a Mayflower hotel "bugging" case to the supreme court, said recent FCC regulations against electronic eavesdropping apparently makes use of the kits illegal. He can still sell the, but cuckolds can't use them.

Most of his "domestic" business, he told the subcommittee, used to involve wives checking on their husbands. But now, he said, four times out of five, it's a husband checking on his wife.

"Can you account for this radical change?" asked subcommittee counsel Bernard Fensterwald.

"We feel it's the fact that women have more freedom to get around," Leon said.

"Did the invention of the pill have anything to do with this?"

Leon said he wouldn't want to comment on that.

In other testimony before the anti-snooping subcommittee headed by Sen. Edward V. Long (D—Mo.), a consultant for the budget bureau, Edgar S. Dunn Jr., said proposals for a national data service centre had acquired a public image that was "grossly misleading and, in many respects, false."

Long said he feared the centre could turn into "a Frankenstein monster" if the information the government has on individual citizens were pooled in one place.

Dunn said the centre was intended to pull together only "general purpose" statistics for the sake of "intelligent public planning." He said he felt sure the centre could be developed with adquate safeguards for individual privacy.

RCMP Prosecutor Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of the British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday reserved decision on a bid to halt court hearings at which the prosecutor is not a lawyer.

The issue was brought before the Supreme Court when Vancouver lawyer J. Raymond McLeod contested the right of two magistrates in suburban North Vancouver to conduct cases in which an RCMP officer acted as prosecutor. MacLeod said the practice contravened the Legal Professions Act.

SIGH OF RELIEF

An 'Old Lady' Enters New Era

By ELIZABETH FORBES

I'm one of the thousands of people in the Greater Victoria area who breathed a sigh of relief when it was announced that while an inside overhaul was in the cards for our Empress Hotel, the ivy-covered, mellow bricked exterior would cemain the same.

Forbes

I'm also one of those who subscribes wholeheartedly to the erection of a convention centre somewhere on the hotel's property. And, it is my hope that the pooled ideas of city officials and hotel officers will result in a quick start on such a project.

Should it become fact it would continue the long-term planning that has already given our city a distinctive image.

Interesting

With the Parliament Buildings, the hotel, the new museum and archives, the announced rejuvenation of the CPR dock area and a convention hall, the Inner Harbor district would become one of the most interesting sections of Victoria.

If city officials and the CPR do come to an agreement about a convention centre, it will not be the first time they have collaborated to improve the outline of the Inner Harbor.

At the beginning of this century they signed a joint contract to "fill in mud flats east of an old wooden bridge across an inlet of James Bay" and to "build a hotel on the reclaimed land."

Mud Flats

The stone causeway that rims the Inner Harbor today, took shape first. It replaced the old wooden bridge. Behind it the mud flats ware filled in with an assorted variety of junk and garbage and with sludge dredged from the bottom of the harbor basin and flumed over the new causeway to the reclaimed land.

There are people living in Victoria who still remember the "terrible stench" that hung over the town while this operation was going on.

Once the flats were filled in "to the level of the surrounding streets," as the contract read, treated wooden piles, some 90 feet long, were driven down through the fill (in an upright position and close together) until bedrock was reached.

The Empress Hotel was built on these piles.

Work of reclaiming the flats commenced in 1901. In January, 1908, the hotel opened its doors to proud Victoria citizens for the first time.

The original structure (now the centre block and the one that is to be modernized first) was planned with 160 rooms. Agreement with the city called for a $300,000 building but actual cost was more than $1,600,000.

100 Rooms

A south wing with 100 rooms was built in 1911 and the first north wing with 74 rooms, in 1912. The Crystal Ballroom was added the same year. Another north wing with 273 rooms and special suites, also the conservatory, were completed in 1929.

The Empress was the final link in a chain of CPR hotels that reached from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

It enabled people to travel to the Far East under one transportation system, by rail, hotel and the famed white "Empress" ships that, in earlier days, docked at our Outer Wharf.

For a two-year period, 1957-59, it was designated as Government House when a fire destroyed the official mansion on Rockland Avenue. While the residence was being rebuilt, lieutenant - Governor Frank Mackenzie Ross and Mrs. Ross occupied the vice-regal suite in the main north wing.

Great Balls

It has been the scene of elaborate balls. It has welcomed famous people and, at times, it has housed the infamous. Royalty has slept under its roof

"Now, the "old lady of Government Street" as it has been affectionately titled on many occasions, enters a new era. One that still sees it keeping pace with the changing image of the city.

It will continue to welcome the famous. It will still cater to elegant balls and social events. No doubt, royalty will again sleep under its roof.

But, once it is refurbished and air-conditioned, tourism will be its big interest. It will attract increased numbers of visitors and many more conventions. The kind that sees several thousand people gathered together in one place at one time.

Mislabelled Drug Could Cause Leukemia, Says Doctor

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Vancouver doctor says 10 to 20 persons here have been given a mislabelled drug which could cause sever anemia or a form of leukemia.

Dr. R. Gordon Hepworth told a community centre meeting Monday night that a Toronto firm placed an imported antibiotic called chloramphenicol into bottles labelled tetracycline hydrochloride. The mistake was discovered a month ago by the Federal Food and Drug Directorate, said Dr. Hepworth, but one batch of 160 capsules—10 to 20 prescription doses—had been distributed in the lower mainland area.

Dr. Hepworth, a urologist, said chloramphenicol can cause serious damage to blood cells in some people and also a type of leukemia.

He charged there has been a "conspiracy of silence" surrounding the error in distribution.

"Very few doctors know that this serious error occurred and I should like to know why."

Tetracycline, said Dr. Hepworth, is a similar drug to chloramphenicol, but it doesn't damage blood cells.

Larry Devlin, regional director of the Food and Drug Directorate, admitted in Vancouver today a mistake had been made in labelling.

He said the drug was recalled a month ago, and to his recollection all the outstanding stock had been accounted for.

"There is a possibility, though, that some was dispensed," said Mr. Devlin.

Dr. William Ibbott, a Vancouver haemotologist, said chances are only one in 250,000 that a person taking chloramphenicol would develop anemia, and the odds against contracting leukemia are even greater.

"The chances of being hit by a five-ton truck are much greater than the chances of severe anemia from this drug," said Dr. Ibbott.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DELANEY—In loving memory of my dear husband, Frank Delaney who passed away June 16, 1964.

That shows how a heart is torn.
But the lonely tears of the after years
And a sorrowing silently borne.

At night when all is silent
And sleep forsakes my eyes,
My thoughts are on the lonely grave
Where my dear husband lies.

—Sadly missed by his loving wife and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

JOWETT—In loving memory of our Dad, Oswald Jowett;

We had a wonderful dad.
A dad who never grew old;
His smiles were made of sunshine,
His heart, of pure gold.

He gave us love in fullest measure,
Care, devotion, memories to treasure;

He shared our hopes, our joys, our fears:
Thank you, dead Dad, for those precious years.

—Kathleen, Lloyd and Joan, Betty, Gary and Jennie.

ZARELLI—In loving memory of Frank Zarelli, who passed away June 15, 1940.

Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.

—Fondly remembered by his wife and family.

CAVEMAN CAMPERS

These are some of the reasons that people prefer Caveman Campers. The famous Caveman Steel frame. Insulation under floor, ½" fibre board and lower sides plus the aluminum, 3-burner stove plus automatic oven. Canopy over stove with light and exhaust fan. 75-lb. ice box. ½" Marine plywood construction. Magazine rack. Rear outside light over door. Large safety glass look-out over cab. This camper is built in Victoria, handy for service and warranty. Easy to instal—just hook turn buckles to sides, no need to get under truck to tighten bolts. These are just a few of the standard features.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Hoo, boy! Just when you think cartoon creators have exhausted almost every avenue of ideas, they continue to come up with more.

Stephen

Seven new half-hour animated color cartoon series, and another cartoon new to the network, will highlight the 1966-67 Saturday mornings on CBS-TV.

Added to such establishd funnies as Mighty Mouse and Tom and Jerry will be Mighty Heroes, Frankenstein Jr. and the Impossibles, The Space Ghost, The New Adventures of Superman, Tthe Lone Ranger, The Road Runner, The Beagles and Underdog.

A quick look at the new cartoons results in the following descriptions:

Mighty Heroes will feature a new type of hero, Diaper Man, who works out of a crib and uses an incredible baby bottle, nipple and all, to fight diabolical villains. Hero companions; Strong Man and Cuckoo Man, Tornado Man and Rope Man are the bumblers in the set.

Underdog is the same old super-dog.

Frankenstein Jr. and the Impossibles is another in the super-hero-adventure category. The Impossibles adopt the guise of a rock 'n' roll trio, but in reality are crime fighters known as Fluid Man, Multi Man and Coil Man. You guessed it. One turns himself into puddles, the other into a human bed spring and the third into multi-figures.

Frankenstein Jr. is a monster robot, 30 feet tall, who is able to talk and think. He's manipulated by a kid.

The Space Ghost is an interplanetary being who wears a wrist band which can render him invisible. Think you've had enough? Wait half a mo'. Co-starring with Space Ghost is Dino Boy, whose adventures centre in a prehistoric lost valley, cavemen, dinosaurs and all.

New Adventures of Superman, starring Clark Kent (Superman) and girl reporter Lois Lane, will be new both in scope and approach. The voice of Superman will be that of Bud (To Tell the Truth) Collyer, as it was in the days of radio.

The Lone Ranger brings to the lineup one of the classic heroes in a new Western cartoon series.

The Beagles will highlight the activities of a canine rock 'n' roll duo with a penchant for getting into trouble.

The color lineup should glue the small fry to the set for hours on end. As for ideas, well, there's hope for us still, Clem.

RIVIERA of VICTORIA
Certainly the view from the heights is as good or better than that of the Riviera; its sandy beaches are the best and warmest in Victoria; the area is sheltered from cold sea breezes by Mt. Douglas which also diverts the city smoke and haze; it can be reached by two routes from the city, a scant 15 minutes drive. All this plus good schools, you will find at Cordova Bay. Check for yourself or better still, call me. Prices up to $36,500. You'll never regret moving "in" to Cordova.

$500 DOWN, rest like rent, a really nice little apartment — like home, nicely decorated, wired for range, washer, and with electric heating. 2 good bedrooms, living room, kitchen and modern bathroom. It's in a commercial area, and as a matter of fact, this clean little building was once a shop, and may have real value in a commercial sense, at some time in the future. For retireds it is on the bus, there is a store across the street, and it has a big garden with fruit trees, raspberries, strawberries, gooseberries, and taters. Asking price is $7,950, it's certainly cheaper than renting, and twice as nice.

A WORLD OF YOUR OWN
CHARACTER, CHARM and GRACIOUSNESS prevail in this beautiful mature home situated on a hill top (with SEAVIEW), in a setting of tranquil charm. The manicured lawns, hundreds of shrubs and trees make this a "PRIVATE PARK" of your own with absolute PRIVACY. There is an air of gracious formality in the 16x14 Living room; the 18½x14 Dining room will accommodate that very special suite you have found so hard to place. Both these rooms are luxuriously carpeted and have fireplaces. The PANELLED DEN is perfect for quiet entertaining. Large family size CONVENIENT KITCHEN, utility and one-piece plumbing completes the picture on the main level. UPSTAIRS we find THREE LUXURY SIZED BEDROOMS—the master Bedroom with a quaint fireplace, and room to spare; a pretty vanity bath with separate toilet. OIL HOT WATER HEAT. DOUBLE CARPORT. Homes like this are hard to find, and only ill health forces this sale. Priced to sell quickly at $15,500.

Ky To Delay Changeover To Civilians

SAIGON (AP) — South Viet Nam's ruling junta today endorsed Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's timetable to delay transfer of power to a civilian regime until next year.

The 20-man military-civilian junta said it would prolong its life by limiting the role of the constituent assembly to be elected Sept. 11 to writing a constitution.

The junta's decision seemed certain to cause new outbursts of defiance from the militant Buddhists, who have been campaigning for the immediate relinquishment of power by the ruling generals.

Buddhist - led demonstrators rioted today in the streets of Saigon for the third consecutive day after a two-week political truce. The riots were on a small scale, and riot police and army rangers quickly broke up the demonstrations with tear gas and clubs.

In the northern Buddhist stronghold of Hue, hundreds of followers of the radical monk Thich (venerable) Tri Quang fasted all day and prayed in the streets before simple altars to commemorate Buddhists who fell fighting government forces in Da Nang last month.

Tri Quang continued his own anti - government, anti - American hunger strike for the eighth day. A Buddhist spokesman said he was in a weakened, serious condition and the clandestine Buddhist radio said his heartbeat had become irregular.

Driver Jailed

Vernon Jack, 10415 West Saanich Road, was sentenced to 90 days in jail when he was convicted in traffic court Tuesday of driving while his permit was suspended.

He was stopped by police on Broad Street June 3 and admitted not having a driving licence. Jack also was fined $35 on a careless driving conviction.

Two drivers were fined in central court when they pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Mrs. Lyn Jones, 4745 Rosehill, was charged after she was involved in a minor road accident on Glanford June 6. She was fined $300 and had her driving permit suspended.

Earl Fletcher, 1209 Pearce, was fined $400 and also had his driving privileges cancelled. Police stopped him on the Trans - Canada Highway near Thetis Lake Park June 7 after he was observed weaving over the highway centre line.

DANCERS, HORSEMEN ENTERTAIN

Square dancing and a horse show will be attractions of the continuing Saanich Diamond Jubilee celebrations this weekend.

Twenty-two square dance clubs are expected to participate at a jamboree starting at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

"I imagine other groups will be coming too," said Coun. Edward Lum of the Diamond Jubilee Committee.

The Western Horsemen's Club will put on a three-hour show Sunday starting at 1 p.m. in an open field near the entrance to Beaver Lake Park.

Seven different events will be staged, including a trotting race and jumping.

All entries are to be made on the day of the show and there are no fees, said Coun. Lam.

Labor Board Rules On Saanich Workers' Status

The Labour Relations Board has ruled that five Saanich municipal employees are employees under the Labour Relations Act.

Three others were deemed not employees, meaning they exercise management functions or are employed in a confidential capacity in matters relating to labor relations.

Both the municipality and the Saanich Municipal Employees Association, Local 374, sought the board's decision.

Ruled employees were assistant clerk Allen Ford, welfare administrator Frank Heaton, building inspector David Smith, assistant general superintendent of works Frank Smith and Mrs. Jo-Anne Morrison, secretary to Reeve Hugh Curtis and comptroller John Tribe.

The board decided that planner Tom Loney, parks superintendent Bert Richman and John Berikoff, assistant to Mr. Tribe, are not employees under the Labour Relations Act.

'Withdraw All Planes'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara announced plans today to withdraw all U.S. Air Force aircraft units from France in the "next few months."

ACCRA (Reuters)—The Ghana government today ordered the release from protective custody of 18 persons, including Alex Quaison-Sackey, former foreign affairs ministers and one-time president of the United Nations General Assembly.

Lump in Breast Requires Attention

By WALTER C. ALVAREZ

Here is the sort of story I keep hearing: a married woman writes to say that she is a worrisome person who for two years kept going every few months to a surgeon to have a lump in her breast checked. She sensed that the doctor thought she was a worrywart, and foolish, but finally she insisted on having the lump removed and biopsied (examined under the microscope). Then the doctors found that it was cancer. As the surgeon said in self defence, he cannot be operating on every woman who comes into his office with a lump in the breast. The unfortunate fact is that even when expert fingers can tell that the lump is a smooth cyst (a bag with a little fluid in it) the doctor cannot be sure that there is not a tiny cancer beginning inside of it.

Alvarez

I never have a lump in the breast removed if I can feel that it is made up of two or three little cysts stuck together. Sometimes one can learn more about a lump by having it X-rayed, but even with the new "Egan technique," in about one in 12 cases, a mistake can be made. A few hundred times I have hated to ask women to submit to having lumps taken out of their breast; I knew that the chances were perhaps 98 in 100 that it was benign, but if she happened to be in the remaining two per cent group, she might lose her life.

For the many women who have "shotty" and perhaps painful breasts, full of little cysts—and who every so often have to have a big cyst cut out and examined, the best thing I know is to have a surgeon cut through the crease xelow the breast, lift the breast up and scoop out all the glandular tissue—leaving the nipple, the skin and the fat under it. Women have been so happy after this type of operation that I can highly recommend it. Unfortunately it does not seem to be well known to surgeons.

Here is a letter from a man who is very anxious about his neice, who has been living on a diet that was prescribed for her by some food faddist. He convinced her that only wise eating will cure cancer, and can save people from having surgery for tumors on the womb. Hence, for years now the poor girl has been trying to keep alive on raw fruits, raw vegetables, nuts and plenty of water—in fact, large quantities of water. So far, about all that has happened is what anyone could have foreseen would happen—she has lost a lot of weight and looks very ill.

ask Andy

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-ovlume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Cheryl Holman, age 11, of Spokane, Wash., for her question:

What Is Protein?

Nutrition begins when we sit down to dine. Our eyes sparkle at the colorful salad, our noses savor the soup and our taste buds drool toward the ice cream. Our stomachs, however, are interested in the fat, carbohydrate and protein content concealed in these gratifying groceries.

The body uses protein-rich foods to build and to rebuild its living cells. Young people need meat and dairy products to build growing muscles, and people of all ages need these protein foods to rebuild the body's tissues from day to day. Extra proteins are used as fuel to provide us with peppy energy. However, we cannot see these basic food elements on the dinner table. They are invisible molecules among many other molecules in our food items.

Proteins are complex chemicals made by the plant world. There are many different types, but only about 20 of them are useful to the human body. Molecules are bundles of atoms, and all protein molecules contain atoms of nitrogen and carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. Some also contain atoms of sulphur or phosphorus. Plants absorb these basic chemical elements from air, soil and water and assemble them into molecules.

These molecules are heavy—more than 100 times heavier than molecules of sugar and simple fat. They are extremely complex—too complex to be made by scientists. Each big protein molecule is assembled from smaller molecules of a few atoms. These smaller molecules are chemicals called amino acids. When soaked in hydrochloric acid the big protein molecules break apart into these smaller amino acids.

Remake Plant Protein

The same thing happens when the body digests the proteins we eat in our foods. The tiny amino acids are small enough to pass through the intestine walls to the blood stream. The daily quota goes to the tissues where older chemical building blocks are exchanged for new ones. The body stores no protein and daily supplies are needed for constant tissue building and rebuilding.

Animals remake plant proteins into richer proteins that are more useful to the human body. Our best protein foods contain all of the 20 or so vital amino acids and most of these complete proteins are in lean meats, eggs and milk. Some of the vital amino acids are lacking in even the most protein-rich vegetables such as soybeans.

As the population grows, food becomes a major problem and the hardest problem is providing enough protein for the world of the future. Experts say that we cannot supply enough meat, which is the best source of protein. Plans have been suggested for adding the missing amino acids to plant proteins. Concoctions made from soybeans and peapods, peanuts and coconuts, grasses and even water weeds could then be used as complete protein foods in the human diet.

Andy sends a 15-inch World Book Globe to June Lowery, age nine, of Johnstown, Pa., for her question:

What is Universal Time?

The 24 time zones divide the globe from pole to pole like the sections of an orange. As we cross from zone to zone we must move our clocks backward or forward one hour. From Newfoundland to Alaska we cross four time zones. Pittsburgh is in the Eastern Time Zone and when your clock says noon, Andy's clock in California says it is only 9 o'clock. Daylight Saving Time also adds problems to traveling time.

Surely these time problems have a sensible answer—and so they do. One of the lines from pole to pole is set aside to mark a noon than can belong to the whole world. This line runs through Greenwich, England. We figure our time zones from Greenwich Time and because it is the same all over the world we sometimes call it Universal Time.

Esquimalt Student Wins Book Prize

Miss King had been selected by a committee of history teachers in the school for excellence in historical studies.

The club plans to give similar prizes to scholars in the city's other four senior high schools on their awards days.

Arctic Examined

MONTREAL (CP) — Establishment of an Arctic research centre was announced Tuesday by l'Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales—School of Advanced Commercial Studies, a University of Montreal affiliate. The announcement was made by Francois-Albert Ranger, director of the centre, who said the program includes dispatching experts to do on-the-spot research.

WISE MEN LISTENING TO EX-CITY PAPERBOY

By GORDON RITCHIE

It's been a long time since he was a paperboy here, delivering the news to Victoria homes. But his work still involves delivering papers.

Scientific papers, though.

And to attentive audiences of leading scientists from all over the continent.

Richard Holmes, Ph.D., is the scientist in charge of the tissue culture and bio-chemical department of the famed DuPont Institute in Wilmington, Delaware.

He is here to see his brother Tom Smith, 620 Kelly Rd., and to meet scientists at Uvic and UBC.

He recently delivered papers to conferences in Atlantic City and San Francisco, and next year will speak at the International Bio-Chemical Congress meeting in Japan.

WISE MEN LISTEN

When he talks, wise men listen.

Complex as his work is, the results he and his staff have obtained are of considerable importance.

He grows human cells — entirely separate from the human body in "completely chemically defined conditions."

And the cells he grows act as "hosts" for vaccines and serums. Their use greatly increases the safety of such vaccines as the Salk vaccine for polio.

These home-grown cells are also important in recent developments in the fight against cancer.

"The cancer scene has taken a very positive turn recently," he says. "A large number of researchers are exploring the results obtained when extracts of a tumorous growth are combined with a foreign protein and reintroduced into the body."

The body then sets to developing its own defences against the cancer—antibodies.

This entire area of research is still in the experimental stage, Dr. Holmes noted, but the results have been "interesting."

HOME GARDEN

Water In Rain, Ignore Stare Of Neighbors

By HILDA BEASTALL

A showery day should take the gardener out to see what is new, at the same time changing the position of the sprinklers. Watering on overcast days and while raining, in summer, is an easy way of saving water, since little is lost in evaporation.

Hilda

Pleasure is where we find it, and surprises in the garden are usually pleasant.

It was both to find that the plants of cistus, the Rock-rose, had far more flowers open on one of the showery days this week than on the previous sunny days.

★ ★ ★

The showy, saucer-shaped blooms of crumpled, silky texture may be as wide as three inches across, of bright pink, soft pink, pure white, or white witha purple blotch at the base of each of the five broad petals.

Since these cistuses are usually rated as excellent for sunny dry soils, even for dry banks, I had thought the blossoms would require plenty of sunshine to bring them out.

Now I am inclined to believe they need more moisture than previously thought necessary, but once they are well established in a sloping dry bank will do well because their deeply penetrating roots will have found down below, the moisture they need.

This is also the reason why a cistus will not be successful in a small planter or container.

Some of the cistus family have dark green foliage which remains over winter, making a pleasing evergreen shrub. One species grows to four or five feet in height with leathery dark green leaves, and handsome white blossoms with purple blotch.

Another has lighter green leaves, decidedly sticky, low spreading branches possible no higher than two feet, and the same white with purple blooms.

Although the blossoms are not individually long lived, they are produced in such numbers that the shrubs are in bloom over three or four months.

It is difficult to have these plants under exact varietal or even specific names, for they appear to hybridize so freely that worthwhile seedlings are often encountered.

Uvic Appoints New Instructor

A former foreign service officer with the U.S. state department has been appointed an instructor in English at the University of Victoria.

Philip E. Heron is at present teaching acting and giving literature courses at College of the Holy Names and at St. Mary's College, California.

He took up a teaching career after two years in the U.S. foreign service. Previously he obtained his master of arts degree from the University of California at Berkeley.

Health Fund 'Paltry'

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition members Tuesday criticized as paltry the government's $500,000,000 health resources fund designed to help build and improve medical schools, teaching hospitals, research units and ohter facilities.

The House passed a resolution approving the fund and gave first reading to legislation that will set it up.

Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon), a physician, said the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges believes $514,250,000 is needed within five years just to maintain present standards.

Medical research alone needs $500,000,000 in Canada within the next 10 years according to the Bladen commission on education, said R. William Howe (NDP—Hamilton South), also a physician.

ESTIMATES EARNINGS

The lifetime earnings of 800 doctors who crossed the border to the United States last year will amount to $400,000,000, said Dr. P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East). They went south because training and research facilities were inadequate at home.

Most provinces can use up their share of the fund within a few years, Dr. Howe said.

The assistance plan, to cost the federal treasury $85,000,000 this year, would have no ceiling on future benefits.

The federal government now shares with the provinces in four assistance progams — to the aged, the blind, the disabled, and the unemployed.

OPENS FIVE AREAS

The new plan opens up five new areas of federal spending:

—To 200,000 needy mothers and children, integrating mothers' allowance programs into comprehensive assistance measures.

—For health care to persons in need, covering "any range of medical and associated health services, including drugs and dental and optical care, that the provinces choose to offer."

—For welfare services aimed at removing or preventing poverty, child neglect or dependence on public assistance.

—For maintenance costs of child welfare authorities.

—For work activity projects, to provide "socially useful activity to help persons in need move towards self-support."

DOCTORS

Uneasiness Directed At Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — The uneasiness of doctors on the subject of government-sponsored medical care insurance is directed more toward provincial governments than toward Ottawa, Prime Minister Pearson said Tuesday

He told the Commons doctors are worried more about application of four cardinal principles fixed for the plan than about the principles themselves.

Becuse the provinces will administer the insurance scheme, the difficulties will have to be settle at the provincial level.

Mr. Pearson was replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who noted a report that the Canadian Medical Association still has "sharp disagreements" with federal officials on medical care.

Provinces must fulfill four conditions to qualify for federal grants to medical care.

Their plans must be publicly administered, universal in that they cover 90 per cent of the population, portable between provinces and broad enough to cover a full range of physicians services.

SEES PROBLEM

New Democrat Leader Douglas asked whether a problem is cropping up in the interpretation of the federal demand for public administration.

Had the government retreated to a requirement for public audit only?

"I do not think it is in order to discuss the doctors' views of public administration," Mr. Pearson said.

Several other questions on the subject were not allowed by Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux.

Mr. Pearson promised the opposition could go into all the detail it wants when medical care legislation is introduced. It is promised before the end of the current session and the government target for medical care insurance to come into effect is July 1, 1967.

YOUR HEART MAY BE BEATING BUT YOU CAN BE RULED DEAD

PARIS (Reuters) — France's highest medical authority has decided that a man whose heart is still beating may be ruled dead if it can be proved that his brain will never again be able to resume control of his vital functions.

The effect of the National Academy of Medicine's decision will be to permit French surgeons in certain clearly-defined cases to remove living organs for transplanting from men with no hope of life.

Doctors specializing in such grafting operations had been faced with a moral dilemma in deciding whether they were organs — heart, lungs or liver — from a "dead" man who might technically be still alive.

Modern medical apparatus enables such organs to be kept going by artificial means even when a patient's cerebral functions are totally extinguished.

The uncertainty was ended when the academy accepted the report of a special commission set up in January to define the symptoms of death in such special cases.

The most useful of such symptoms were those revealed by study of the functions of the brain, a fragile organ indispensable to life and impossible to replace, the report said.

Grounding of Planes Threatens Air Canada

Midnight Strike By Sales Staff

MONTREAL (CP)—If Air Canada sales employees go on strike tonight action by other employees supporting them may ground all the company's aircraft.

Cleve Kidd, spokesman for the Canadian Airline Pilots Association and for the National Liaison Committee of airline employees, of which the pilots' association is a member, said today the company's pilots have a work contract and will therefore report for work.

"However, there are groups represented on the liaison committee who may feel differently, and one, the International Association of Machinists has already intimated that its members will not cross picket lines," he said.

GIVE SUPPORT

Only members of the International Association of Machinists (CLC) and the pilots have so far announced how they will act in the event of a strike. In Vancouver, two labor unions vital to ground operations and maintenance at Vancouver International Airport have pledged their support for the sales employees.

They are the Teamsters Union (CLC) and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union. The oil workers fuel aircraft and the teamsters operate ground transport, airlines limousines and baggage trucks.

Mr. Kidd said it is up to each group to make its own decision on how it should act if there is a strike.

"The pilots have a work contract which they feel binds them to report for work and so they will. But if aircraft are not serviced they won't be able to fly them."

Meanwhile, talks between representatives of the Sales Employees Association and Air Canada continued in Montreal in an effort to avert the walkout at midnight of 1,453 sales staff.

The National Liaison Committee sent a telegram to Labor Minister Nicholson Tuesday saying that from the support indicated by its member unions it is apparent the airline would be unable to operate if the strike came off.

The union, which represents passenger agents, switchboard and communications operators, is asking for a two-year contract providing for yearly 10-per-cent pay increases and a 37½ hour work week.

The airline has offered a 15-per-cent increase over a 30-month period.

Air Canada sales clerks currently are paid $64.70 a week, increasing to $109.49 after 5½ years of service.

TO HANOI

Envoy Makes Second Trip

OTTAWA (CP)—Special Canadian envoy Chester Ronning now is in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, on his second mission there since March for the Canadian government, officials said today.

RONNING
. . . Canada's views

They said he is carrying on the exchange of views begun in March.

However, it was assumed that Mr. Ronning, 71, of Camrose, Alta., is sounding out of the Communist North Vietnamese on the possibilities of negotiating an end to the Viet Nam war.

Mr. Ronning, born in China, came out of retirement this year—he had been a career diplomat—to make a special trip to Hanoi and Saigon to talk with Vietnamese officials of north and south. He has been advising Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin on the Southeast Asia situation and it had been assumed here for some weeks that he would return to Viet Nam for further discussions.

IS DISCREET

Canada has also been making what have been officially described as "discreet probes" as a member of the International Truce Supervisory Commission to examine any and all leads toward possible negotiations.

Informants here said the government regards a new Geneva conference as the best framework for negotiations aimed at settlement of the Viet Nam war.

It was the 1954 Geneva conference which established the commission on which Canada, India and Poland serve.

Mr. Ronning saw long service as Canadian ambassador to China before the Communist victory there and subsequently as Canadian ambassador to India.

MOSCOW VISIT of four or five days, starting July 12, has been scheduled by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India. She expects Soviet economic and military assistance to her country to be discussed with Russian leaders.

Non-Military Group Formed By 9 Nations

SEOUL (AP) — Nine East Asian and Pacific nations agreed today to form a new regional association — called ASPAC—for co-operation in economic, political and other non-military fields.

Arrangements for the new organization, which will be an informal one without a treaty basis, were worked out today during the second day of the Asian-Pacific conference of foreign ministers.

It brings together South Korea, Japan, Nationalist China, the Philippines, South Viet Nam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and Malaysia. Laos attended the talks here as an observer and may join.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman of Thailand, who will become chairman of ASPAC because its next meeting will be in Bangkok, said other countries such as India might also come in if they desire.

Bombs Drop Closer To Port City

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. military headquarters today announced the closest air raids of the war to the North Vietnamese port city of Haiphong.

Navy bombers from aircraft carriers in the Tonkin Gulf struck a missile radar site eight miles southeast of Haiphong Tuesday and a spokesman said the radar went off the air.

The spokesman said another navy raid hit a radar site 10 miles northeast of Haiphong and that this radar also went off the air. Both radars were used for guidance of Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles which are clustered around Hanoi and Haihong for defence of the country's two major cities against American air raids.

Most-Wanted Man Escapes

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre Daoust, 25, who figured in the Quebec Provincial Police's first 10-most-wanted men list last year before his capture in October, escaped from custody today while in a hospital for treatment.

Daoust was awaiting trial on two charges of armed robbery, conspiracy and possession of offensive weapons. Police describe him as dangerous.

Canada, France Move Closer

PARIS (CP)—Plans for closer economic co-operation between Canada and France and their business communities were outlined today at a press conference winding up the 12-day visit of a Canadian mission led by Industry Ministry C. M. Drury.

"The mission is most gratified by the results of their visit," said Drury as he reported on talks among industrialists, bankers, scientists and others in his party with their French counterparts.

"The many discussions and contacts have provided us with the basis for suggestions for furthering closer economic collaboration between the two countries and their respective business communities.

"There is scope for intensified inter-change between Canada and France in fields where contacts at present exist but also important opportunities for closer relations in new fields."

The 22-man mission was returning to Canada "with an important message to Canadian business and industry. It is that French accomplishments in scientific and technical research and their industrial applications should be better known in Canada and should find a growing place in our economic future."

Canada also had "much that is new and promising to offer in the area of research and advanced technology from which" France may wish to profit.

"I believe that the intensification of our co-operation through investment and technological exchanges will together with other measures soon result in a significant expansion of trade between us."

U.K., Canada Plan Joint Committee

LONDON (CP) — Canada and Britain may establish a joint cabinet committee to deal with trade and other economic problems between the two countries. The committee would function like one which already exists between Canada and the United States.

Canadian Trade Minister Winters was reported by informants to have the joint cabinet idea in mind when he told a Canadian Chamber of Commerce meeting Tuesday that he has been "exploring with my colleagues in the British government how we might strengthen the process of consultation and co-operation between us."

Winters said also that Canada and Britain are working together in many fields and "I hope to see this collaboration deepend and spread for the benefit of both our countries."

HONG KONG HIT AGAIN

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Early morning rains caused new flooding and a land slide today in Hong Kong, where the death toll in weekend rains may be as high as 80.

Nearly an inch of rain fell in 10 minutes in today's downpour, undoing much of the reconstruction work since Sunday's deluge in this British colony.

HEAVY FINE LEVIED ON FIREMEN'S UNION

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal judge has ordered payment of $27,500 in fines by the Railway Firemen's Union and its president for violating a court order in a four-day strike against eight big U.S. railways last April.

However, U.S. District Judge Alexander Holtzoff postponed collection of the fines until the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (AFL-CIO) and union president H. E. Gilbert can appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Mine-Mill Charge Withdrawn in U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government decided Tuesday to drop a charge of Communist infiltration brought in 1955 against the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.)

The charge had been laid by the justice department before the Subversite Activities Control Board, an independent agency, covering the period 1952-55.

The board four years ago found that some leading union officers "are, and have been, members of the Communist party." But an appeal court referred the case back to the board on grounds the evidence was old and did not cover—as required by law—the last three years.

The justice department said that in effect it has no new evidence for that period, but a spokesman said this does not mean it considers the union leadership was free of Communist affiliation in 1952-55.

Mine-Mill has about 40,000 members in the United States as well as representing workers at Trail, B.C., and other Western Canada mines and metal-refining plants.

Several years ago the United Steel Workers of America (CC) finally won a long fight with Mine-Mill to represent workers at the International Nickel Co. mining - refining operation at Sudbury, Ont.

There have been merger talks going on recently between the two unions.

FAKIR Laxman Sandra Rao entertained his audience in Bombay by walking over burning coals, eating glass and tacks and drinking nitric acid. As the climax of his performance he promised to walk on water but he promptly sank to the bottom of the tank. Police prevented the angry spectators —who paid $8,000 to see the miracle—from mobbing Rao. Maybe he should freeze the water first. (AP Wirephoto.)

Purge Continuing

TIEUP LOOMS ON RAILWAY

OTTAWA (CP)—Underlining a growing militancy among its 22,000 rank-and-file railway members, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers has voted heavily in favor of a strike if current contract demands on the CNR are not met.

They are seeking a 90-cent hourly wage increase spread over a two-year contract plus job security.

A union source said today the secret mail ballot was counted at CBRT headquarters here Tuesday and is overwhelmingly in favor of strike action if necessary. President W. J. Smith is to announce details of the count Thursday.

The CBRT is one of three groups of non-operating unions negotiating with the two major railways. All three are in the conciliation stage, expected to take another month.

Seaway Walkout Possible Friday

OTTAWA (CP)—"The minor skirmishing is just about over," and mediation talks in the St. Lawrence Seaway labor dispute will get down to the vital wage issue later today, the federal mediator reported at the luncheon recess.

Senator Norman MacKenzie in his third day of discussions with seaway officials and representatives of 1,200 operating employees, said progress had been made on some of the lesser items at issue.

The workers are poised for a Friday noon strike. A walkout would cripple the international waterway by sealing off the Montreal - Lake Ontario and Welland Canal sections.

Core of the dispute is the union's demand for a 35-per-cent wage increase to bring Canadian rates more in line with those paid on the U.S. side of the seaway.

Dock Workers Accept

MONTREAL (CP)—A mass meeting of some 1,700 Montreal members of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) voted unanimously today to end their 39-day strike and go back to work Thursday morning.

A spokesman for the ILA said some 350 longshoremen were back on the job at the port of Trois-Rivieres at 8 a.m. today. The Trois-Rivieres longshoremen voted Sunday night to accept the latest contract offer made by the Shipping Federation of Canada.

National Harbors Board officials say the longshoremen will be working every night until 11 o'clock to clear the multi-million-dollar backlog of export and import goods now clogging the three ports.

Basically, there ain't sech a big diff'rence b'tween all these strikes an' th' Buddhists settin' themselves on fire.

LONGSHOREMEN OFFICIALS SURRENDER, OUT ON BOND

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union surrendered to a sheriff at the Vancouver courthouse today.

The men appeared before Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere and were each released on their own recognizance pending hearing of contempt of court charges.

Mr. Justice Verchere ordered the men arrested Tuesday. The men, heads of the union's various B.C. locals, failed to appear in court as ordered. Today they walked en masse into the courthouse and voluntarily surrendered.

Among the 10 persons was G. W. Ball, business agent for the Victoria local.

The contempt proceedings arose after the employers obtained a supreme court injunction ordering the union to countermand any orders it issued for a Victoria Day work stoppage.

Company officials had heard the union planned to order its members to book off sick en masse to protest statutory holiday working provisions.

B.C. ports were crippled May 23 when most of the union's 2,000 members failed to report to work.

Short-Shorts Win Ascot Leg Race

LONDON (AP) — The thigh-high skirt made its first appearance at Royal Ascot Tuesday — and appeared to be a winner. A few of the short-shorts even got into the august royal enclosure.

Ladies' legs, in fact, attracted almost as much attention as did horses' legs. Says fashion writer Denis Foley in The Evening News:

The four days of Royal Ascot racing make one of the world's most colorful outdoor shows and Tuesday's opening was more colorful than most by the excellent weather. The sun was shining and the temperature was in the mid-70's.

The show got under way with the procession of five carriages.

In the first carriage with the Queen and Prince Philip, Lord Snowdon, husband of Princess Margaret, and the Duke of Beaufort, the Queen's master of horse.

Princess Margaret, the Queen Mother and their escorts were in the second carriage, while in the third were Princess Marina, the Duchess of Kent, Princess Benedikte of Denmark and their escorts.

YOUNG MAN attired in morning coat and grey topper and his girl friend, wearing a short, short skirt, listen to a gatekeeper tell them they can't enter the Royal Enclosure at the opening of four days of Royal Ascot racing in London. The reason wasn't the short skirt . . . they didn't have proper tickets. (AP Wirephoto.)

The Big Hunt Is On For Museum Exhibits

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Provincial museum scientists and wildlife experts are collecting everything from moose to scorpions for eventual display in huge dioramas to be set up in the new $7,000,000 Centennial Museum in Victoria in 1967.

Rocks, soil, various types of sand, limbs of trees, insects, flowers, grasses, reptiles, rodents and deer from various regions of B.C. are being shipped to Victoria for storage or stuffing and mounting at a Yates Street museum workshop.

STILL MOVING

The pocket mouse from the Okanagan Valley is a small rodent which stores its food in two pockets on the side of its cheeks.

Erik Thorn, display chief, who is in charge of planning and setting up the tableaus, said the field workers are concentrating on material from the dry region of the province.

The specimens from the various dry, wet, alpine and sub-alpine belts of the province, will be displayed in tableaus depicting the animals in their natural environment, he said.

"But we'll still have to collect lots of material," he said. "It may be years before we have all the animals we want."

NEED SEA LION

Experts have yet to get a sea lion, various species of porpoises, dolphins, whales and an elephant seal.

An elephant seal may take years to acquire as they are rarely seen in B.C. waters. It weighs about 2½ tons. The male has a long inflatable snout, and in old specimens, the skin about the chest and shoulders is deeply cracked and wrinkled.

Since museum officials started to make an inventory of their stock for the new museum, they have also discovered they are short of material from the culture of interior Indians.

INTERIOR NEGLECTED

"The interior Indians seemed to have been neglected," said one official. "We have thousands of items from the coastal Indians, but scarcely anything from the interior tribes."

"So you see, this business of collecting is not an easy one," he added. "It's going to take time."

Guild Wants $185 A Week City Subsidy

In a letter to city council guild secretary Vera E. Rawlings points out that Bastion Theatre Studio already receives a subsidy of $185 a week from the city. She suggests that the same amount should be paid the guild.

The city has made two attempts to persuade the Intermunicipal Committee to share the Bastion grant but the other municipalities have been cool to the idea. The matter is still tabled at the intermunicipal level.

SHARP ATTACK

In the application for $185 from the city the guild also launches a sharp attack on the Bastion group.

Noting that when it was formed three years ago Bastions' aim was to provide the city with professional theatre, the guild adds: "Now that three seasons of Bastion Theatre Studio's activities are behind us, it would appear that despite very generous financial support from city council in the way of special subsidies, little progress has been made towards the stated aims previously referred to."

The letter also pointed out that the guild has been in operation for 34 years and plays to audiences ranging between 6,000 and 10,000 each year.

COAST THREATENS

A recent Food and Agricultural organization study describes the southernmost 1,000 miles of Chile as "a coast . . . as inhospitable as is to be found on the globe."

Saanich Will Publicize Fire Department Survey

A report by an official of the fire marshal's office into the Saanich fire department will be made public.

"There will be no attempt to withhold the report from the public," Coun. Alan Newberry, chairman of council's fire committee, said Tuesday night.

His comments followed a fire committee meeting which was informed that Ernest Rickey of the fire marshal's office will complete his survey this week.

When the report is written it will go to the fire marshal who will send it to Saanich.

Coun. Newberry said it would be possible for the fire marshal's official to recommend a structure and training program in whih promotion can be made to fire chief from within the department in the future.

Mr. Rickey's terms of reference are to evaluate and report on the structure and organization of the department and to:

● Report on the location and complement of existing fire halls;

● Recommend any changes in the present organization and structure of the department including proposals for the training of personnel;

● Estimate future requirements with respect to personnel, equipment and any additional fire halls;

● Make any further recommendation deemed advisable to provide an adequate level of fire protection and emergency ambulance service for the municipality.

Eaton's to Expand, Asks Zoning Change

A public hearing will be held in Saanich into rezoning application for a warehouse and retail store for the T. Eaton Company near the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

At the same time, Farmer Construction has withdrawn an application for a warehouse at Oak Street and Valley Avenue.

Both sites were reported in The Times six weeks ago as possible locations for second outlet for Eaton's, supplementary to the downtown store.

Mr. Suteliffe said he had talked to the highways department, which would have to approve the application in addition to Saanich because it is within half a mile of an intersection with an arterial highway.

Highways officials had told him they are not in a position to say where the planned Patricia Bay Freeway will finally be located.

TRAFFIC STUDY

Last year's metropolitan traffic study recommended the freeway swing off Douglas Street just south of Swan Lake and cut behind the Town and Country Shopping Centre to link up with the city's Rose-Blanshard extension.

Prospect Petition Gets Nod

Saanich will press ahead with the Prospect Lake watermain local improvement petition with 1964 figures plus 10 per cent for increased cost.

This was recommended by the public works committee Tuesday night after municipal engineer Neville Life said his department is "swamped with work" and unlikely to be able to bring out new figures and plans until the fall.

Committee members agreed there should be no delay in the petition, and said residents should be advised of the costs (plus 10 per cent) of the 1964 petition which failed to gain enough signatures.

The committee also instructed municipal staff to circulate the petition not later than the end of August.

$53 A YEAR

Mr. Life said the average cost for property owners of extending the watermain from its present terminus near the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory would be $53 a year, plus the difference in costs between 1964 and 1966 — perhaps 10 per cent.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1966--PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

A day or two ago, you may recall, an appeal to milk consumers appeared in the advertising columns. It urged customers to put their milk-buying on a cash or token basis so that the man on the route wouldn't have to burden himself with account - keeping. This message was signed chummily, "Your milk salesman".

Since the ad appeared, my ear has been donged by several irate milkmen, whose collective sentiments would curdle cream. "We didn't have a thing to do with that appeal," runs a typical reaction. "The dairies put it in, and I wish they hadn't. Believe me, it's costing us money."

What's happening, he and other pilots of the snub-nosed milk-truck insist, is that too many of their customers are taking the cash - on - the - line preachment too literally.

It used to be, they point out, that the housewife who had used up her tokens and also her cash would settle the impasse with a castial, 'Leave two (or four, or six depending on the age and number of her brood) and I'll pay you day after tomorrow.'

Now, the plaint goes, she mixes up some milk powder or thins a can of condensed, and when her husband comes home, scoots him off to the store for fresh cow in a carton.

"We're offering a service," the salesmen protest, "and we don't object to letting a customer run on credit for a couple of days."

The old red-brick B.C. Protestant Orphanage at Cook and Hillside has the air of a beseiged castle these days, and except for spunky Edward Williams, its directors seem to have been paralyzed by current attacks on an institution which has creaked along usefully for 73 years.

The burden of the criticism showered by child welfare agencies is that the Orphanage methods and plant are outmoded, and that those who operate the private establishment should yield to approved modern practice in caring for the derelict if non-orphaned children brought to it.

Like most disputes, this one has two sides, and the youngster who has been bounced in and out of several foster homes with scarifying effect might well be grateful for the sanctuary an old-fashioned orphanage offers.

It is also to be expected that agencies whose resources fail to match their needs should look longingly at an institution which they see as endowed beyond its requirements.

In any case, since charges have been made they should be answered, not in a scattergun war of conflicting claims, but through a government-sponsored inquiry.

Short takes:

The Red Lion Inns, Industrial League softball team who used to be the Orphans, played their first sponsored game in their new sweaters at Macdonald Park Monday evening. Colors, red with white.

"We had the sweaters," says player Jim Bowes, "and the caps and socks, but the new pants haven't arrived yet, so we wore our old ones. Kind of a half-uniform, I guess you'd say."

Half-rigged or not, the R.L.I.s celebrated the occasion with a 4-3 win.

"They're supposed to stay within limits," he grouches, "but they never do. Why can't they leave the little lakes to the canoes and rowboats? Why don't they go beat up Shawnigan or the salt chuck?"

Why indeed; and how long until the antics of a few force upon boatmen the licensing system which they've so far managed to avoid?

And to a certain treasury department computer at Ottawa: if you insist that $62.04 is mine, so be it. Darn if I'm about to argue with a mechanical brain!

Conventions: Industry Without Smokestacks

By DESMOND BILL

Victoria's future development is no secret.

That report, prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board, shows that industries in Victoria are either static or declining, with one exception—the tourist business.

The future of the city depends on tourists.

Yet one simple development that would give tourism its biggest possible boost has been overlooked until now.

This morning, in a small room at City Hall, tourist promoters were meeting with civic officials to try and bring about that development—the establishment here of a convention centre.

The situation is easily stated: Victoria has more potential for attracting conventions than any city in the Pacific Northwest, but it also has the least convention facilities.

The result is Victoria annually misses convention business that would inject enough money into the economy to fuel a local boom.

Harrison Hot Springs Hotel can handle twice as large a convention as can be jammed into the Empress.

"Victoria isn't even in the convention business," says Nick North, manager of the Imperial Inn and president of the Visitors' Bureau.

No one in the tourist business would dispute that except Les Parkinson, manager of the Empress. His hotel drums up more conventions for the city than any other. There are 64 major meetings booked at the Empress for the rest of the season and convention promoters are working as far ahead as 1972.

But if the Empress is the most active convention hotel it also illustrates the limitations of what Victoria can offer. The biggest convention the Empress can handle is 500 persons, and that only by straining the hotel to its limits.

Hosting a convention is not just a matter of providing space where conventioneers can assemble under one roof. Usually more than one meeting is going on at a time during a convention and often display rooms are required and places where committees can meet. The recent United Commercial Travellers' convention at the Empress is an illustration: it had only 140 delegates but it was enough to plug the hotel.

The Empress has other disadvantages. The main meeting place is in the ballroom which also serves as a banquet room. Conventions have to

More Widening Slated for Fall

Five-Mile Project On Pat Bay Highway

Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi today said his department is busy drawing up specifications for widening five more miles of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes.

"But we have to take it to treasury board for a decision before we can call for tenders," he said.

"There's every chance we will have to do the work itself in the fall because of tourism although there may be some things we can do before then without causing too much disruption."

The new widening project would be the second in a series that is expected to cost a total of about $2 million for most of the 23-mile highway joining Victoria to the Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

Mr. Gaglardi said the current plans do not include overpasses or underpasses at three Sidney area crossroads as requested last year by the municipal council at an estimated cost of $500,000.

NO DECISION

"We're not going to give them everything they're asking for but we're certainly still considering it," he said. "There has been no definite decision made yet."

Although the overpasses will not be included in the next contract, Mr. Gaglardi said they could be added at a later date if a favorable decision is made.

Work is nearing completion on the 2.1-mile widening project begun last fall with paving now underway between the ferry terminal and the northern outskirts of Sidney.

$300 BAIL IN KICKING ACCUSATION

Bail was set at $300 for Donald Logue, 3471 Seymour.

Theoffence is alleged to have occurred Sunday on the Patricia Bay Highway near Royal Oak Burial Park.

'Heinous Conduct'

Three-Month Term Follows Driving Spree

A man who chose the street in front of city police station to go on a car-wrecking spree Tuesday night was sentenced this morning to three months in jail.

James Lemon, HMCS MacKenzie, pleading guilty to charges of criminal negligence, failing to remain at the scene of an accident and driving while disqualified, received one month on each charge, the sentences to be served not concurrently.

His licence will be suspended for two years.

HIT COUNCILLOR

Lemon's car then turned right to go west on Fisgard St. near the police station, striking a car operated by Oak Bay councillor Mrs. Frances Elford, 3045 Lardowne.

The car then crossed to the wrong lane of Fisgard colliding with a parked car owned by Salvation Army Brigadier J. Thiertein, 850 Cook.

Court was told that Lemon then drove west on Fisgard at speeds estimated at 55 and 60 m.p.h. turning on to Store, abandoning the car in a lot and throwing its keys into some bushes.

$1,600 DAMAGE

Aggregate damages to all cars involved were estimated by police at $1,600.

Sentencing Lemon, Magistrate William Ostler said "there is only one thing to do with such heinous and wicked conduct as this."

Three Drivers Lose Licences For Impairment

Norman Gilchrist, 2517 Graham, charged with driving while impaired Tuesday about 9:50 p.m. was fined $350 and his licence was suspended.

Court was told Gilchrist caused a chain collision at Cook and Pandora by colliding with the rear of a car stopped for a red light causing that car to strike the car in front of it.

Total damage to the three cars was estimated by police at $575.

Jury Trial Chosen On Break-in-Charge

One of two men charged with a break-in at Ensign Motors June 8 elected to be tried before a judge and jury when he appeared in central court this morning.

Vern Umphrey, 620 Huxley, was remanded to June 23 to fix a date for a preliminary hearing.

He has been released on $5,000 bail.

Accidental Death Ruled in Drowning

Gerald Chipps of the Becher Indian Reserve died accidentally Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Monday night.

By TERRY IZZARD

And a chiropodist would make a killing.

"They can feel the rope beneath their feet much better when they're without shoes," said the 44-year-old veteran skipper.

●

The cadet training ship will remain here until Friday when she sails to take part in the Vancouver Sea Festival.

The rope, used to operate the ship's 25,242 square feet of sail, has to be renewed every two years.

During the 5,237-mile journey from Kobe, Japan, to here, the Kaiwo Maru relied on sail for more than half the time.

ORPHANAGE MULLS OVER CRITICISM

That was the word this morning from Frank Shandley, president, on Tuesday night's meeting of the Orphanage directors.

Mr. Shandley said the directors are not prepared to make any statement at this time in reply to criticisms that the Orphanage is not realizing its potential in helping needy children in the community.

Merchant Guild Awaits Ruling By Government

The union representing licensed personnel aboard B.C. Ferries is waiting for a government ruling on its application for representation rights.

The Canadian Merchant Service Guild signed up 200 masters, mates and engineers in March, representing 80 per cent of the officer personnel.

A Guild spokesman said he is confident there will be a ruling but declined to speculate on what it might be.

If the cabinet recognizes the group, it would have representation rights but not collective bargaining as spelled out in the Labour Relations Act, which doesn't apply to government workers.

Careless Drivers

Fined this morning in traffic court for charges of careless driving were:

Kenneth Campbell, 501 Obed, $75 and two months suspension; Herman Wood, 562 Dupplin, $40; Margaret Leheim, 2364 Millstream, $40; Henry White, 2127 Vancouver, $40; Thomas Dwight, 245 Lascelles, $40; Albert Findlay, 486 Tolmie, $35; Ralph Stevens, 2531 Government, $35.

SUBSIDIZED SAANICH PLAN FOR ALL AGES

Housing Plan to Council Soon

Subsidized housing for low-income groups in Saanich will come before a council committee meeting next week or early next month.

Coun. Edith Gunning, chairman of the health and welfare committee, said further information will be presented on a possible project by the municipality.

Senior officials were instructed three months ago to report on subsidized accommodation.

Reports by welfare administrator Frank Heaton, assessor Jack Lindsay and planner Tom Loney were presented to the committee April 19.

The committee agreed the subject required careful consideration and it was tabled so that more information could be gathered.

Coun. Gunning said she is concerned at the delay, but wanted to have complete information so a good presentation could be made with a good chance of success.

What is envisaged is a 65-suite three-storey apartment building for low-income people of all ages.

Approved schemes financed under the National Housing Act have 75 per cent of land acquisition and construction costs borne by the federal government and 25 per cent by the province.

Any operational deficit is met 75 per cent by the federal government, 12½ per cent by the province and 12½ per cent by the municipality.

Saanich took the first steps towards such a scheme after hearing of some residents living in semi-slum conditions in old buildings that should be torn down.

A survey by social welfare officials of 45 families receiving assistance showed 28 of them are paying more than 50 per cent of their income in rents and utilities.

Fourteen families are paying between 40 and 50 per cent and three are spending between 30 and 40 per cent.

This compared with the recognized average of 20 per cent of income, said Coun. Gunning.

$75-$225 MONTHLY

The social assistance income of these families ranges from $75 a month to $225 depending on the number of dependents.

She hoped the additional information will be ready in time for next Tuesday's health and welfare committee meeting. If it isn't, it will come up early next month.

'Phone Manner Boosts Sales

By AB KENT
Times Business Writer

Success of an airlines salesman training course was attributed Monday to tape-recording incoming phone calls from potential customers.

W. R. Paull, manager of sales and traffic training for Canadian Pacific Airlines at Vancouver, told Victoria Sales and Marketing Club how his company boosted telephone sales.

He was guest speaker at a Red Lion Inn graduation dinner for 41 students of the club's sales and marketing management course at University of Victoria.

Mr. Paull said 95 per cent of airline business is done via the telephone, but the salesman must "sense the needs of people on the other end."

He said sales training programs conducted by CPA were not paying off in added sales.

Then he had the idea of tape recording the incoming calls of clients.

"What were the people on the other end saying that we were missing? We began to listen . . . All good salesmen are good listeners . . ." the speaker said.

It was discovered when the tapes were played back that a listener could "read other people's attitudes over the phone."

It was discovered that salesmen were doing a lot of talking, but not listening enough.

People who called in could be classified three ways: the buyer, the shopper and the person seeking information.

Mr. Paull said the latter were given prompt, accurate information and thanked for calling; the shopper was sold on the product; and the buyer, since he knew what he wanted anyway, was given specific answers to his questions and a little extra information.

During the first month of application, he said, 55 extra sales were initiated.

The staff had become "people-oriented instead of company-oriented," Mr. Paull explained.

He has served CPA in various managerial and supervisory capacities since joining the company in 1942. Although a native of Trail, he has lived in the four western provinces, for 16 years in Edmonton, and has worked in Europe, South America, Australia and the Orient for CPA.

Those completing the first-year course and given their Uvic evening division diplomas by dean of administration Prof. R. T. Wallace included top student Brian Palin, 1945 Casa Marcia, who received a special award.

Accidents Hurt B.C. More Than Strikes

Industrial accidents in B.C. last year cost 10 times the lost working days and involved four times as many workers as did strikes.

Figures from the Workmen's Compensation Board show 1,132,313 working days lost through job accidents. Labor department figures show strikes caused 104,430 lost working days.

The accident figure represents the number of days work lost by persons receiving compensation. It doesn't include men and women suffering job accidents but off work three days or less.

The number of injured receiving compensation was 27,362, compared with 6,755 workers who went on strike.

Of the working days lost through accidents where compensation was paid, 67 per cent resulted from accidents during the year, 26 per cent from 1964 and seven per cent from 1963 or earlier.

MORE UNRECORDED

A spokesman for the Workmen's Compensation Board said the time-loss figure would "be up considerably" if it included the time lost for job accidents where compensation isn't paid and off-job accidents and sicknesses.

The total number of injury cases reported to the board last year, for example, was 94,632—more than three times the number who received compensation.

Comparative figures for 1964 and 1963 also show accidents outstripping strikes in numbers involved and the resulting lost time.

In 1964, 9,503 British Columbians went on strike but 26,258 received compensation for accidents—and 87,827 cases were reported.

In 1963, 824 workers went on strike compared with 24,461 injuries covered by compensation—and a total of 81,828 injury cases.

Job accidents where compensation was paid caused 10 times the lost working days in 1964 and 44 times the lost working days in 1963 as compared with strikes.

Accident figures for last year, broken down by industry, show forest products lost 346,789 working days because of accidents where compensation was paid. This was 30.7 per cent of the total.

Construction and allied work was second with 217,938 lost working days, or 19.3 per cent, and general manufacturing was third with 149,708, or 13.2 per cent.

JET NOISE MUFFLER

British Buy Rights

LONDON (CP)—Bill Benson, Canadian aviation engineer and test pilot, says he has sold part of the patent rights to his invention for reducing jet noise to a group of British companies whose names are to be disclosed later.

Benson, a British emigrant, who now makes his home in Toronto, said in an interview today he will receive an initial payment of $40,000. This may be increased to $100,000 if the British companies decide to take up patent rights for other parts of the world.

He also will receive consultant fees and royalties on all aircraft and engines which are produced with the use of his designs.

Benson, 38, claims his device, known as the rotorduct power system, can reduce jet engine noise by as much as 65 per cent.

FRENCH JET PURCHASE SETS POLICY

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

PARIS (CP) — Breaking a habit of buying British and American aireraft, the Canadian government announced Tuesday its first purchase of French medium-range jet communications planes.

★ ★ ★

Charles M. Drury, minister of industry and defence production who is heading an economic mission to France, told a press conference Canada is buying seven Mystere-20 fan-jet Falcons at a cost of $8,200,000.

★ ★ ★

The Mystere-20, built by la Compagnie Generale Aeronautique Marcel Dassault, conforms best of all to the needs of the defence department, he said.

Purchase of the eight-to-10 passenger planes marks the first purchase by Canada of French planes for her armed forces, the Canadian embassy said in a statement.

★ ★ ★

There has been French interest in possible purchase of the Canadian CL-125, useful for dousing forest fires, but Drury said the two projects should not be considered on a "tit for tat" basis.

★ ★ ★

Canada's purchase was strictly on merits, he said.

Drury said Canada has a policy of multilateral trade rather than seeking balanced bilateral trade.

Canada would buy from, for instance, Communist Czechoslovakia if "they offered a machine that conformed to our needs and nobody else did."

SPEED HIGH

The aircraft, with a top speed of 560 miles an hour, would be able to travel quickly to any part of the integrated functional commands, returning personnel to home bases, often in the same day.

The Falcons will replace Dakotas and Cosmopolitans, although some of the latter will remain in service.

Top Republican Jailed for Bribery

NEW YORK (UPI)—Former New York State Republican Chairman L. Judson Morhouse was sentenced to two to three years in prison today for bribery and accepting illegal fees to secure a liquor licence for the Manhattan Playboy Club.

N.Y. Rangers Draft Two Players

The draft session was short as only 12 players changed teams.

$1 Million Arena Grant Requested

VANCOUVER (CP)—City council will meet Thursday to discuss a request for $1,000,000 grant toward the cost of an arena which a Pacific National Exhibition official is certain will house a National Hockey League team.

Council will consider a request from Capt. Harry Terry, PNE president, for help in paying the cost of the 14,000-seat arena, $4,000,000 of which will be paid by the British Columbia and federal governments.

160 Members of IWA Pull Strike

VANCOUVER (CP)—About 160 members of the International Woodworkers of America went on strike today at a Canadian Forest Products Ltd. logging camp at Harrison Mills in the Fraser Valley.

The move followed expiration of the IWA's master contract with 120 coast lumber companies at 12:01 a.m. today.

Spokesmen for Canadian Forest Products said the men failed to report for work and threw up a picket line around the entrance to the camp.

Jack Moore, IWA regional president, said he was not notified in advance of the strike.

Pickets May Halt Flights

MONTREAL (CP)—If Air Canada sales employees go on strike tonight action by other employees supporting them may ground all the company's aircraft.

Cleve Kidd, spokesman for the Canadian Airline Pilots Association and for the National Liaison Committee of airline employees, of which the pilots' association is a member, said today the company's pilots have a work contract and will therefore report for work.

"However, there are groups represented on the liaison committee who may feel differently, and one, the International Association of Machinists has already intimated that its members will not cross picket lines," he said.

GIVE SUPPORT

Only members of the International Association of Machinists (CLC) and the pilots have so far announced how they will act in the event of a strike. In Vancouver, two labor unions vital to ground operations and maintenance at Vancouver International Airport have pledged their support for the sales employees.

They are the Teamsters Union (Ind.) and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union. The oil workers fuel aircraft and the teamsters operate ground transport, airlines limousines and baggage trucks.

Mr. Kidd said it is up to each group to make its own decision on how it should act if there is a strike.

"The pilots have a work contract which they feel binds them to report for work and so they will. But if aircraft are not serviced they won't be able to fly them."

Meanwhile, talks between representatives of the Sales Employees Association and Air Canada continued in Montreal in an effort to avert the walkout at midnight of 1,453 sales staff.

The National Liaison Committee sent a telegram to Labor Minister Nicholson Tuesday saying that from the support indicated by its member unions it is apparent the airline would be unable to operate if the strike came off.

The union, which represents passenger agents, switchboard and communications operators, is asking for a two-year contract providing for yearly 10-per-cent pay increases and a 37½ hour work week.

The airline has offered a 15-per-cent increase over a 30-month period.

TO HANOI

Envoy Makes Second Trip

OTTAWA (CP)—Special Canadian envoy Chester Ronning now is in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, on his second mission there since March for the Canadian government, officials said today.

They said he is carrying on the exchange of views begun in March.

However, it was assumed that Mr. Ronning, 71, of Camrose, Alta., is sounding out of the Communist North Vietnamese on the possibilities of negotiating an end to the Viet Nam war.

Mr. Ronning, born in China, came out of retirement this year—he had been a career diplomat—to make a special trip to Hanoi and Saigon to talk with Vietnamese officials of north and south. He has been advising Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin on the Southeast Asia situation and it had been assumed here for some weeks that he would return to Viet Nam for further discussions.

RONNING

IS DISCREET

Canada has also been making what have been officially described as "discreet probes" as a member of the International Truce Supervisory Commission to examine any and all leads toward possible negotiations.

Informants here said the government regards a new Geneva conference as the best framework for negotiations aimed at settlement of the Viet Nam war.

It was the 1954 Geneva conference which established the commission on which Canada, India and Poland serve.

Mr. Ronning saw long service as Canadian ambassador to China before the Communist victory there and subsequently as Canadian ambassador to India.

HEAVY FINE LEVIED ON FIREMEN'S UNION

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal judge has ordered payment of $27,500 in fines by the Railway Firemen's Union and its president for violating a court order in a four-day strike against eight big U.S. railways last April.

However, U.S. District Judge Alexander Holtzoff postponed collection of the fines until the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (AFL-CIO) and union president H. E. Gilbert can appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Canada, France Move Closer

PARIS (CP)—Plans for closer economic co-operation between Canada and France and their business communities were outlined today at a press conference winding up the 12-day visit of a Canadian mission led by Industry Ministry C. M. Drury.

"The many discussions and contacts have provided us with the basis for suggestions for furthering closer economic collaboration between the two countries and their respective business communities.

"There is scope for intensified inter-change between Canada and France in fields where contacts at present exist but also important opportunities for closer relations in new fields."

The 22-man mission was returning to Canada "with an important message to Canadian business and industry. It is that French accomplishments in scientific and technical research and their industrial applications should be better known in Canada and should find a growing place in our economic future."

Canada also had "much that is new and promising to offer in the area of research and advanced technology from which France may wish to profit."

"I believe that the intensification of our co-operation through investment and technological exchanges will together with other measures soon result in a significant expansion of trade between us."

"The mission is most gratified by the results of their visit," said Drury as he reported on talks among industrialists, bankers, scientists and others in his party with their French counterparts.

TIEUP LOOMS ON RAILWAY

OTTAWA (CP)—Underlining a growing militancy among its 22,000 rank-and-file railway members, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers has voted heavily in favor of a strike if current contract demands on the CNR are not met.

They are seeking a 90-cent hourly wage increase spread over a two-year contract plus job security.

A union source said today the secret mail ballot was counted at CBRT headquarters here Tuesday and is overwhelmingly in favor of strike action if necessary. President W. J. Smith is to announce details of the count Thursday.

The CBRT is one of three groups of non-operating unions negotiating with the two major railways. All three are in the conciliation stage, expected to take another month.

MOSCOW VISIT of four or five days, starting July 12, has been scheduled by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India. She expects Soviet economic and military assistance to her country to be discussed with Russian leaders.

Mine-Mill Charge Withdrawn in U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government decided Tuesday to drop a charge of Communist infiltration brought in 1955 against the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.)

The charge had been laid by the justice department before the Subversive Activities Control Board, an independent agency, covering the period 1952-55.

The board four years ago found that some leading union officers "are, and have been, members of the Communist party." But an appeal court reversed the case back to the board on grounds the evidence was old and did not cover—as required by law—the last three years.

The justice department said that in effect it has no new evidence for that period, but a spokesman said this does not mean it considers the union leadership was free of Communist affiliation in 1952-55.

Mine-Mill has about 40,000 members in the United States as well as representing workers at Trail, B.C., and other Western Canada mines and metal-refining plants.

Several years ago the United Steel Workers of America (CC) finally won a long fight with Mine-Mill to represent workers at the International Nickel Co. mining - refining operation at Sudbury, Ont.

Non-Military Group Formed By 9 Nations

SEOUL (AP) — Nine East Asian and Pacific nations agreed today to form a new regional association — called ASPAC—for co-operation in economic, political and other non-military fields.

Arrangements for the new organization, which will be an informal one without a treaty basis, were worked out today during the second day of the Asian-Pacific conference of foreign ministers.

It brings together South Korea, Japan, Nationalist China, the Philippines, South Viet Nam, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand and Malaysia. Laos attended the talks here as an observer and may join.

Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman of Thailand, who will become chairman of ASPAC because its next meeting will be in Bangkok, said other countries such as India might also come in if they desire.

Bombs Drop Closer To Port City

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. military headquarters today announced the closest air raids of the war to the North Vietnamese port city of Haiphong.

Navy bombers from aircraft carriers in the Tonkin Gulf struck a missile radar site eight miles southeast of Haiphong Tuesday and a spokesman said the radar went off the air.

The spokesman said another navy raid hit a radar site 10 miles northeast of Haiphong and that this radar also went off the air. Both radars were used for guidance of Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles which are clustered around Hanoi and Haihong for defence of the country's two major cities against American air raids.

LONGSHOREMEN OFFICIALS SURRENDER, RELEASED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union surrendered to a sheriff at the Vancouver courthouse today.

The men appeared before Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere and were each released on their own recognizance pending hearing of contempt of court charges.

Mr. Justice Verchere ordered the men arrested Tuesday. The men, heads of the union's various B.C. locals, failed to appear in court as ordered. Today they walked en masse into the courthouse and voluntarily surrendered.

Among the 10 persons was G. W. Ball, business agent for the Victoria local.

The contempt proceedings arose after the employers obtained a supreme court injunction ordering the union to countermand any orders it issued for a Victoria Day work stoppage.

Company officials had heard the union planned to order its members to book off sick en masse to protest statutory holiday working provisions.

B.C. ports were crippled May 23 when most of the union's 2,000 members failed to report to work.

Late Sales At Vancouver

VANCOUVER—Closing sales: Blue Star 1,000 at .28; Futurity Oil 800 at $1; Endako 100 at $11; New Indian 500 at .29; Rodstrom 500 at .44; Trans. Con. Resources 1,000 at .20½; Buttle Lake 500 at .61; Dynasty 200 at $12.50; Peace River Pete 1,000 at .31½; Vananda Ex. 1,000 at 18½.

Basically, there ain't sech a big diff'rence b'tween all these strikes an' th' Buddhists settin' themselves on fire.

U.K., Canada Plan Joint Committee

LONDON (CP) — Canada and Britain may establish a joint cabinet committee to deal with trade and other economic problems between the two countries. The committee would function like one which already exists between Canada and the United States.

Canadian Trade Minister Winters was reported by informants to have the joint cabinet idea in mind when he told a Canadian Chamber of Commerce meeting Tuesday that he has been "exploring with my colleagues in the British government how we might strengthen the process of consultation and co-operation between us."

Winters said also that Canada and Britain are working together in many fields and "I hope to see this collaboration deepen and spread for the benefit of both our countries."

Seaway Walkout Possible Friday

OTTAWA (CP)—"The minor skirmishing is just about over," and mediation talks in the St. Lawrence Seaway labor dispute will get down to the vital wage issue later today, the federal mediator reported at the luncheon recess.

Senator Norman MacKenzie in his third day of discussions with seaway officials and representatives of 1,200 operating employees, said progress had been made on some of the lesser items at issue.

The workers are poised for a Friday noon strike. A walkout would cripple the international waterway by sealing off the Montreal - Lake Ontario and Welland Canal sections.

Core of the dispute is the union's demand for a 35-per-cent wage increase to bring Canadian rates more in line with those paid on the U.S. side of the seaway.

Dock Workers Accept

MONTREAL (CP)—A mass meeting of some 1,700 Montreal members of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) voted unanimously today to end their 39-day strike and go back to work Thursday morning.

A spokesman for the ILA said some 350 longshoremen were back on the job at the port of Trois-Rivieres at 8 a.m. today. The Trois-Rivieres longshoremen voted Sunday night to accept the latest contract offer made by the Shipping Federation of Canada.

National Harbors Board officials say the longshoremen will be working every night until 11 o'clock to clear the multi-million-dollar backlog of export and import goods now clogging the three ports.

DANCERS, HORSEMEN ENTERTAIN

Square dancing and a horse show will be attractions of the continuing Saanich Diamond Jubilee celebrations this weekend.

Twenty-two square dance clubs are expected to participate at a jamboree starting at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

"I imagine other groups will be coming too," said Coun. Edward Lum of the Diamond Jubilee Committee.

The Western Horsemen's Club will put on a three-hour show Sunday starting at 1 p.m. in an open field near the entrance to Beaver Lake Park.

Seven different events will be staged, including a trotting race and jumping.

All entries are to be made on the day of the show and there are no fees, said Coun. Lum.

Labor Board Rules On Saanich Workers' Status

The Labour Relations Board has ruled that five Saanich municipal employees are employees under the Labour Relations Act.

Three others were deemed not employees, meaning they exercise management functions or are employed in a confidential capacity in matters relating to labor relations.

Both the municipality and the Saanich Municipal Employees Association, Local 374, sought the board's decision.

Ruled employees were assistant clerk Allen Ford, welfare administrator Frank Heaton, building inspector David Smith, assistant general superintendent of works Frank Smith and Mrs. Jo-Anne Morrison, secretary to Reeve Hugh Curtis and comptroller John Tribe.

The board decided that planner Tom Loney, parks superintendent Bert Richman and John Berikoff, assistant to Mr. Tribe, are not employees under the Labour Relations Act.

'Withdraw All Planes'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara announced plans today to withdraw all U.S. Air Force aircraft units from France in the "next few months."

ACCRA (Reuters)—The Ghana government today ordered the release from protective custody of 18 persons, including Alex Quaison-Sackey, former foreign affairs ministers and one-time president of the United Nations General Assembly.
